Union Agrees to Take Recognition Battle To Roosevelt; Praises Green for Truce

He Actually Waited.
About the Big Fight.
Pleasant Default Day.
Old Albion Is Shocked.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

MR. HITLER takes his dictatorship and himself seriously. Italy, aghast, reports that he kept Mussolini waiting twenty minutes for luncheon. You can imagine Mussolini's chest swelling more than is usual, his jaw taking on an extra firm, menacing width, as he waited the twenty minutes.

Once Louis the Fourteenth, stepping from his palace just as his coach drove up, exclaimed full of indignation: J'ai failli attendre "I almost waited."

MUSSOLINI, as powerful in Italy as Louis the Fourteenth ever was in France, actually did wait twenty minutes, twelve hundred seconds of noble rage.

Italians appear not to have given Chancellor Hitler too warm a welcome, and reports of the meeting say that Mussolini found the German chancellor "visionary, dreamy," hard to "pin down to facts."

Mussolini, all to himself and his little group of attendants, has the biggest hotel at the Lido, which is the biggest in Italy. No other guests may register at the hotel while Mussolini is there.

IF INTERESTED in the "snows," or heavyweight fighters of yesteryear, learn that Primo Carnera, gian. Italian who lost the world heavyweight championship to Max Baer, of California, is ill in bed, far from happy. It was pitiful, reporters said, to see Carnera in his dressing room after the fight, sitting with his face in his huge hands, tears running out between his fingers.

Prizefighters often weep after a fight and so do other men, suddenly relieved of a great strain.

WHEN JOHN L. SULLIVAN and Charles Mitchell were locked up in the French jail at Senlis, after their fight under "prize ring rules" on Lord Rothschild's training grounds near Chantilly, both were weeping in separate cells. The jailor had taken away their silk handkerchiefs, "that they may not hang themselves," as he told this writer, who reported that meeting for Charles A. Dana.

CARNERA'S FRIENDS said before the fight, and it was true, that he had been laid up with an attack of influenza and a slight temperature. "Experts," however, say that Max Baer would have beaten Carnera "the best day Carnera ever saw."

Baer, making horrible faces at his adversary one moment, taking on the look of a demon of hatred and malice, laughing and joking, the next moment, is as strange a creature as ever entered the prize ring. His victory will help to confirm the well-established theory that among human beings "a mixed breed is the most efficient breed."

Mr. Baer is much mixed, his mother a woman of Scotch-Irish blood, more than six feet tall, from whom he got his powerful body; his father, half Polish Jew, from whom, probably, he got his capacity for "taking punishment" and thinking under difficulties. That thinking the Jewish people possess widely.

Had they not possessed it, they would have all been killed during the middle ages and two thousand years of persecution before and after the middle ages.

To do justice to the races assembled in Baer's blood and brain, it would perhaps be fair to say that his Irish-Scotch mother supplied the physical strength that sent Carnera to the floor at the beginning of the first round, while his twenty-five per cent of Jewish blood did the planning and thinking that kept him constantly, as reporters said, "pounding Carnera just under the heart."

YESTERDAY was "default day" in Europe. Following France and England, Italy, Hungary, Poland, Latvia, Rumania and Esthonia, with more or less convincing excuses, notified Uncle Sam in diplomatic language:

Europe was legally and in honor bound to pay the United States today, on account of war debts, a total sum of $477,843,644.45. And all that Uncle Sam will get will be $166,538 from little Finland, perhaps poorest of all the countries, but

FAMED ACES AT BIRDMEN PAGEANT

Turner Seeking Record On Way to Perform Before Throng

A score of famous Army and civilian fliers winged their way to the City-County Airport today to stage the first Junior Birdmen Air Pageant and celebrate Pittsburgh's first Aviation Day.

A squadron of Army pursuit planes sped here from Selfridge Field, Mich., and Col. Roscoe Turner, maker of transcontinental records, sped here from Seattle.

Among the Selfridge Field fliers scheduled are Lieut. Y. H. Taylor in a Boeing P—26 monoplane, and Lieuts. Boatner, Bidwell and Arthur in three P—12 planes.

Perfect weather for the pageant sponsored by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph wing of the birdmen, was promised by observations at the airport weather bureau.

THRONG EXPECTED

Lieut. Corley McDarment, commandant at Rodgers Field, and master of ceremonies for the air show, expected several thousand persons at the field with the promised clear skies.

Col. Turner was prepared to give Western Pennsylvania youngsters new thrills. He said he was making only two stops—at Cheyenne, Wyo., and Des Moines.

On the last leg of his nearly 3000-mile trip across the country he was expected to push his gold-colored plane to a new record.

His pet lion, "Gilmore," companion of many flights, will not be along. He is three years old and now weighs 480 pounds—entirely too much lion for a light racing ship.

LOCAL FLIERS TAKE PART

Lieut. Felix Vaitkus, who will soon attempt to fly over the Atlantic to Lithuania, a feat which has cost the lives of two of his countrymen when their plane crashed in Germany, was to be at the field with the plane in which he will span the ocean. He will talk to the members of the Junior Birdmen.

Lieut. Vatikus will be guest at an air show at Bettis Field tomorrow attended by several thousand Lithuanians of the district. He also will be a dinner guest tonight at an affair at the Mayfair Hotel arranged by leading Lithuanians of the city, Mayor McNair being one of the scheduled speakers.

Among local fliers were Helen Richey, Helen MacCloskey, Jack Morris, Bod Trader, Bob Pyper, Bill Murray, Irving Newman, Fred Green, Jimmy Franklin, Vi Shakarian and Helen Ball.

August C. Haller, noted glider pilot, and Arnold Smith and Joseph Isuro, model plane builders, also were on the program.

Bell Absent; Denny Thinks Questions Of Hoey 'Silly'

Records of officers of the present City Police Bureau are to be thoroughly investigated by the Police Research commission, members of that body have indicated.

Safety Director A. Marshall Bell and Acting Supt. Jacob Dorsey were not present at the hearing yesterday in City Council chambers. They will be called at the next session.

A number of police officials, including County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, testified before the Commission. All agreed that politics is present to a harmful degree in the police department.

McGovern suggested a county-wide police force. Former Safety Director Harmar D. Denny, Jr., said there should be a state-wide organization.

James N. Hoey, former inspector and member of the Police Commission, quizzed Denny on police personnel. He asked:

THINKS IT SILLY

Denny replied:

"I don't believe that story. I think it's a silly question. I won't answer it."

"Would you retain such a man?"

"I think that's silly, too. I'd fire him right away, if I knew it."

Hoey asserted:

"These conditions that I have described to you are facts, and before we are through we will prove it to you."

PENSIONERS ACTIVE

John Barry, former police inspector with 24 years of service in the Police Bureau, suggested the creation of a board set up by the court with absolute control over the Police Bureau which would be subject to rigid Civil Service protection.

Leo Coleman, former assistant police superintendent, said two-thirds of the men receiving police pensions are more active than some of those now on duty in the department.

TIGHE SEEKS MEETING WITH PRESIDENT TO ARRANGE PEACE

In the threatened nation-wide steel strike postponed at least until June 30, there were these developments today:

1—President Tighe, of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, announced he would seek an immediate conference with President Roosevelt to lay before him the peace plan adopted by the convention here.

2—Some 200 delegates to the steel workers' reconvened strike convention were reporting back to their lodges and assuring their members: "The next move is up to President Roosevelt."

3—Progressive "rank and file" leaders within the Amalgamated ranks, although disappointed by the convention's action, were quoted as "willing to go along," but predicting another showdown by June 30.

4—A labor disputes resolution—aimed particularly at the threat of a steel strike—came before both houses of Congress today. It was expected to pass quickly.

Congress Set To Pass New Labor Bill

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—(AP.)—The House today passed the administration bill to establish mediation boards to settle collective bargaining disputes.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—(AP.)—Out of a welter of congressional controversy over the labor dispute bill, the administration today plucked an eleventh-hour agreement and pushed the measure toward passage as steel workers marked time in a strike move.

At the insistence of President Roosevelt, a clause in the measure construed as preserving the permissive right of union organizations to bargain collectively in wage and hour negotiations was held intact. The measure was expected to pass quickly.

Late yesterday Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, formally introduced the measure. The Republican floor leader, Senator McNary, of Oregon, said the measure as introduced was satisfactory to the regular Republicans.

SOME OPPOSITION

Independent Republicans, however, voiced opposition to the substitute for the original labor disputes bill introduced by Senator Wagner. They said they

Strike Move Believed At End

Steel workers of the nation today had placed their fight for union recognition in the hands of President Roosevelt and for the time being, at least, the threat of a country-wide strike has been eliminated.

The next move, according to leaders of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, was up to Washington.

A few, apparently disappointed "progressives" — so-called leaders in the "rank and file" movement —expressed the belief there would be another showdown by June 30, but the general belief of observers was that the backbone of the strike movement had been broken.

CONGRESS END BY NIGHT SEEN

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The dying seventy-third Congress raced toward adjournment today with its leaders demanding enactment of President Roosevelt's new housing act and labor conciliation bill before allowing the exhausted legislators to leave for their homes.

There was every indication Congress would adjourn by nightfall.

This possibility came with startling suddenness after Republican leaders of the Senate reached an accord with the President on the labor conciliation measure.

Both House and Senate faced a long legislative day. The Senate met at 9 o'clock, since it must pass both the measures. The House, which previously enacted the housing bill, must approve the conciliation measure.

Jailed Man Reveals Story of Child's Cremation

Staff Correspondent.

SHARON, Pa., June 16.—After a restless night in the Mercer County Jail, Homer Sanders, 43, electrical engineer, Legionnaire and Boy Scout leader, faced court here today as the key figure in the gruesome story of 4-year-old Leah Minerva Dilley's disappearance and death.

He is accused of cremating the child's body in a pyre of dry brush while his own three children innocently toasted marshmallows over the crackling embers which concealed the little form.

Sanders, in a statement signed before Mayor J. Fred Thomas and police officials, told of destroying the body after finding the child dead in a house he had fumigated with deadly fumes of potassium cyanide. He said:

"I was just like a hit and run driver—through fear I did not report it to police."

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., June 16.—(AP.)—Randol Eugene Norvell, life term kidnaper who escaped from Southern Illinois Penitentiary through a sewer pipe, was captured here early today by prison authorities and county authorities.

Norvell, authorities said, was captured without a struggle. The head of the gang that abducted August Luer, Alton (Ill.) banker, surrendered after his captors fired warning shots through the floor of a small frame house where he was found.

He was taken back to the prison at Chester, Ill., by Warden Joseph Ragen, who directed the capture.

Norvell and James O'Connell escaped from the prison April 27 by crawling through a small sewer pipe that emptied into the Mississippi River. O'Connell was captured near Pomona, Ill.

Dorothy Parker Secret Bride of Actor

DENVER, June 16.—(AP.)—Dorothy Parker, writer recognized in some circles as the queen of the punsters—"a girl's best friend is her mutter," you know—disclosed today she is the wife of Alan Campbell, an actor.

The poet and playwright, who once said she would rather have babies than write, moved into an apartment house here with Campbell and announced they were married last October by a Westbury, L. I., justice of the peace, saying:

"We didn't care who knew about our marriage and made no special effort to keep it secret."

Two years ago she observed:

"There is something ridiculous about a woman who writes. The only full life for a woman is marriage and babies. So what have I to write for? Only the wolf that you must stumble over at the door."

Mrs. Parker and Edwin Pond Parker II were divorced in 1928. They married in 1917.

Campbell is in Denver to play juvenile roles in a stock company. He is from Richmond, Va., where he once worked for the Richmond News Leader, and is a graduate of Virginia Military Institute.

Senator Davis Booed Crashing Lodge Meet

ALLENTOWN, Pa., June 16.—(AP.)—A greeting of boos and hisses for United States Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, director general of the Loyal Order of Moose, is reported by lodge officials as Allentown Moose's answer to the Senator's "crashing" of a local lodge meeting.

The demonstration occurred last night when Davis, accompanied by Albert U. Ladner, of Philadelphia, chairman of the executive committee of the Supreme Lodge, brusquely pushed past the outer guard at the closed session and stalked to the stage to speak, the officials said.

The visitors' right to enter without being invited was questioned by Edward H. Schlechter, dictator of the Allentown Moose. The Senator maintained that privilege went with his office, but local lodgemen disputed this on the grounds that Allentown has been suspended from the national order for refusal to pay per capita tax.

Davis was finally prevailed upon to retire while a vote was taken on whether to permit him to speak. The permission granted, he spoke and left the hall, calling over his shoulder for "loyal members of the Moose" to follow. Three of 900 men are reported to have complied.

STEEL STRIKE SIDETRACKED FOR DEAL WITH ROOSEVELT

NEXT MOVE UP TO CAPITAL, UNION SAYS

Backbone of Holiday Drive Believed Broken

"Speaking for the entire membership of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, we desire to express to you our gratitude and sincere appreciation for the splendid service you rendered by coming to our convention. By so doing, you made possible through your counsel and personal appeal the holding in abeyance of what would have been the greatest industrial conflict the iron and steel industry has ever witnessed."

It was signed by Michael F. Tighe, president, and Louis Leonard, secretary-treasurer, by order of the international executive board.

Tighe today hoped to arrange, with Green's assistance, for an interview with President Roosevelt. Union officials said they had not been in communication with the President relative to the action taken at the meeting here.

STRIKE VOTE DELAYED

The convention's action in postponing any definite strike action came late last night after a strenuous day climaxed by Green's dramatic appeal for peace.

A committee of 16, headed by George J. Williams, of Canonsburg, and made up of eight so-called "progressives" and an equal number of the "old guard," was named in the afternoon. Their job was divided:

First—To recommend to the convention whether or not they deemed it advisable to reconsider the strike action of the April convention.

Second — If reconsideration was recommended to make additional recommendations concerning the Green "four-point" peace proposal.

A convention recess for half an hour was taken when the committee went out.

Some three or four hours later the committee made a partial report to President Tighe, recommending reconsideration of the strike action. They were sent back to study the Green plan.

DEBATE TO FLOOR

In a meeting hall strewn with papers and filled with perspiring men in their shirt sleeves, the issue was brought out into the open at last. Speaker after speaker had his say.

Finally, just before 11 o'clock, the Green proposal, with only two minor changes, was put up for a vote.

AMENDMENTS MADE

In the amendments to the Green plan, that point dealing with settlements of complaints about wages, hours, etc., was held in abeyance "for action by the international board of the Amalgamated . . . in case we are not successful in obtaining affirmative action on the plan as a whole."

The changes were made in that section referring to elections for representation, the text being changed twice to read "to bargain collectively through 'organizations' (not representatives) of their own choosing" and again where the word representatives was used in the same paragraph referring to those "selected by a majority of the employes."

These changes were the ones made in the original draft of President Green's proposal and they were considered of a minor nature.

GREEN PROPOSAL

The Green proposal in its present form is practically the same as the revised Wagner bill, which was introduced yesterday in Congress, except that it asks for a majority rule in collective bargaining balloting.

The convention hall presented an unusual sight after adjournment. Groups of workers, still discussing their action, stood about talking among themselves. There was no enthusiastic celebration which might be expected to follow a feat of victorious proportions.

Only around the speakers' platform, where President Tighe still held forth, was there anything approximating a demonstration. One after another, members of the so-called conservative element of the union group shook the hand of their president and quietly spoke their congratulations.

The old man, his eyes sparkling—his heavy body obviously tired—turned for a moment to address the gathered newsmen. He said:

"It is a sad state of affairs in the country when an autocratic group like the steel corporations can practically defy the government. We're not a bunch of Communists or radicals. We are purely and simply trade union men."

The action of the convention was looked upon by its leaders as "smart strategy" in the face of almost unsurmountable odds. President Green, earlier in the day, had pledged "full co-operation" of the federation if the plan was adopted.

CONGRESS SET TO VOTE NEW PEACE PLAN

Labor Union Rights In Plan Preserved By President

would demand passage of Wagner's bill, which is broader than the administration bill.

The Senate Labor Committee immediately began consideration of the substitute proposal, and reported it to the Senate within an hour.

President Roosevelt told reporters he had no objection to the Republican amendment proposing that the life of the suggested act, together with the special boards to be named by the President to investigate labor disputes and hold secret workers' elections, be limited to one year.

The Chief Executive said, however, he did have very definite objection to any proposal to eliminate the word "organizations" from the provision in the substitute bill covering collective bargaining.

The section, which he referred reads:

"Any board so established is hereby empowered, when it shall appear in the public interest, to order and conduct an election by a secret ballot of any of the employes of any employers, to determine by what person or persons or organization they desire to be represented in order to insure the right of employes to organize and to select their representatives for the purpose of collective bargaining as defined in Section 7A."

ROOSEVELT STAND

The President made it clear he believed that section of the National Industrial Recovery Act provided the workers with a free hand in selecting their representatives, whether individuals or organizations. He likewise was emphatic in his belief that employers must treat with workers or organizations so selected.

The subject of minority representation in collective bargaining was regarded by him as a matter to be worked out in individual cases. He believes instances exist where neither employer nor employe desire such a setup and that in these cases law should not force it upon them.

There was no comment from the White House on the proposal for special boards endowed with broad powers, made by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, at the Pittsburgh meeting of the steel workers.

ALUMINUM MEN EYE NEW CODE

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., June 16.—Members of the Aluminum Workers Local Union today were eying with critical eyes the NRA code being drawn for the aluminum industry.

The workers, who claim to be organized 90 per cent in the plants of the Mellon-controlled Aluminum Company of America, were reported to have taken two ballots on this expected code.

The vote in one was reported as 2,075 to 14 in favor of a strike if the code sets a minimum wage of 37½ cents an hour—the rate asked by the company.

The union men also were described as voting to strike unless the minimum wage is set at 50 cents an hour.

Since the strike two months ago the minimum has been 44 cents.

BOMBING ROCKS MINING TOWN

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 16.—(AP.)—Fairbank, a mining community six miles west of Uniontown, was rocked early today by a dynamite explosion which caused damage estimated by police at several thousand dollars.

Worst damage was sustained by the two-story frame Fairbank postoffice, across the street from a dwelling owned and occupied by Peter Guirieri, where police reported a bomb had been placed under the porch.

Only the porch of the brick Guirieri home was damaged, Guirieri and his wife were badly shaken up by the blast. The entire front of the postoffice was blown in. The second floor was vacant. An adjoining beer dispensary also was damaged. Many windows were broken within a six-block radius.

The young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ned Palo, who live near the scene of the blast, narrowly escaped as glass from an explosion-shattered window littered her bed.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 16.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Now that the prize fight is out of the road, the American people can settle back down to the trivial things of life.

Will Rogers

The steel strike looks better than it has in weeks, looks like a mighty fair proposal that Mr. William F. Green, president of the whole American Federation of Labor, made, whereby the President is to appoint three disinterested men. Now if the steel men will agree to that, why it looks that would finish it. Funny how long it takes people to see what to do, when there ain't but one thing to do. If Mr. Roosevelt can just get that strike fixed, and get those Congressmen out from under those government paid for electric fans by July first, he will be sitting pretty.

Yours, WILL.

FATHER SKUR DIES AT 54

The Rev. Father Joseph Skur, 54, who suffered a cerebral hemorrhage yesterday, died today in St. Francis Hospital. He was pastor of St. Mary's Church of the Assumption, Slovenian Roman Catholic Church in Fifty-seventh street.

Father Skur was born in Prosnid, Italy, and ordained in 1907. Before coming to Pittsburgh he had pastorates at Joliet, Ill., and Lorain and Cleveland, O.

FINLAND'S MITE ON DEBT LEDGER

WASHINGTON, June 16.—(AP.)—Closing of the war debt ledgers last night disclosed that the United States had collected $166,538 of the $477,843,644—approximately one-twenty-eighth of one per cent—due from 13 European nations.

Finland alone maintained its high financial rating by making its customary cash payment of its semi-annual installment on its total debt of $8,726,645.

Jugo-Slavia did not even reply to the American note requesting payment of $525,000 past due and $300,000 due yesterday on its total debt of $61,625,000.

Lithuania, the tenth successive nation to announce default, delivered a note through Mikas Bagdonas, charge d'affaires, explaining that adverse economic and financial conditions made it impossible to remit any payment.

BANKER GUILTY ON 2 COUNTS

EBENSBURG, Pa., June 16.—(AP.)—A Cambria County jury, after deliberating more than nine hours, convicted David Barry, a banker, on two charges of making false entries last night.

Barry is former president of the closed First National Bank and the closed Title Trust and Guarantee Company, both in Johnstown.

Sentencing was deferred pending a new trial motion.

In four days of testimony, witnesses alleged that funds deposited with the First National Bank were transferred without their consent to the Title Trust Company. The witnesses included members of the Johnstown District School Board.

Under the charges on which he was convicted, Barry faces a maximum fine of $500 or not less than six months in jail.

NRA PICNICS ON FIRST BIRTHDAY

President's Licensing Authority Expires With Anniversary

WASHINGTON, June 16.—(AP.)—NRA took a holiday today on its first birthday.

Hugh S. Johnson closed the offices and sent hundreds of employes down the Potomac for a picnic.

Johnson himself, with Donald Richberg, NRA general counsel; Edward P. McGrady, labor adviser, and Johnson's assistant, Miss Frances Robinson, planned to fly to Charleston, W. Va., to participate in a state holiday commemorating NRA.

Amidst the celebrating NRA's most stringent police power was slipping away apparently unmourned. This is President Roosevelt's authority to license recalcitrant industries and to put them out of business if they violated license terms.

It is a club which never has been wielded in the 12 months of activity which Johnson estimates has brought under the Blue Eagle 95 per cent of industry as measured by employment.

SHEPPARD ASKS NEW RUM LAW

WASHINGTON, June 16.—(AP.)—Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, co-author of the prohibition amendment which was repealed six months ago, has fathered a new effort in Congress for federal regulation of the liquor traffic.

Contending conditions since repeal have proved the states cannot handle the liquor problem, Sheppard offered a constitutional amendment to restore to Congress the right to regulate or prohibit alcoholic beverages.

He submitted his amendment, he told the Senate, "in order that it may be in shape for discussion and action in connection with the coming elections."

He said the amendment was more flexible than the previous one, in that it would give Congress discretion to restrict, prohibit, or do nothing, if it desired, about the liquor traffic.

U. S. JAILS MAN IN EXTORT CASE

Cyrus Blose, 59, of Hamilton, Jefferson County, was committed to jail to await trial in Federal Court on a charge of sending a threatening letter to Clayton Sprankle, of Punxsutawney, a coal operator, demanding $500. He was arrested yesterday by Deputy United States Marshal D. A. Goldman. The letter read in part:

"Put $500 in a match box and leave it in a bushel basket in your little shanty, where you keep your tools. I have a .38 revolver, and you will get the contents of it if you fail to leave $500. I don't fool with people."

The letter received by Sprankle was mailed December 9, and a few days later Blose was caught near the "shanty," it was said, by Sprankle and another man, who were armed with a shotgun. He was turned over to state police at Punxsutawney and after being interrogated was allowed to go to his home. The case was reported to the government authorities, and after an investigation by special agents of the Division of Investigation, Department of Justice, a complaint was filed against Blose before the United States Commissioner.

Hunting 'Sister'

RAQUEL TORRES

BOGUS SISTER IRKS RAQUEL

By HARRISON CARROLL
International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, June 16.—Her Latin temper up, Raquel Torres has set the police looking for an imposter, who claims to be her sister and who has been blazing a trail of unpaid bills in Mexico City and now, with increasing impudence, in Hollywood itself.

The girl, described as a pretty Mexican type, began her operations shortly after Requel's marriage to Stephen Ames. In view of the financial standing of Raquel's new hubby—he thinks nothing of buying $20,000 cars—various stores and hotels have been duped into allowing the so-called sister to run up bills.

What makes it all the easier for the imposter is that Raquel actually has a sister, but her name is Renee and she is well known around the film colony.

In case the swindler doesn't know it, private detectives engaged by Stephen Ames have a full record of her activities and have unearthed some unsavory facts about her previous record in Mexico City.

6 COUNCILMEN VISIT MAYVIEW

Though admitting, after a tour of Mayview, that they were "impressed" by conditions there, six Councilmen today had not committed themselves on Welfare Director Southard Hay's proposal that $1,600,000 be spent on modernizing the institution.

Hay and Supt. J. S. Hammers showed the group through the City Home and Hospital yesterday, pointing out the need of additional room and equipment. Dr. Hammers said Mayview is 50 per cent overcrowded.

Councilmen who made the investigation were Walter R. Demmler, P. J. McArdle, John J. Kane, Thomas J. Gallagher, William A. Magee and Charles Anderson.

Crucible Men Vote For Company Union

DUCE-HITLER PART WITHOUT ARMS PACT

Dictators in Accord On Independence Of Austria

VENICE, June 16.—(AP.)—Adolf Hitler, manifestly satisfied with results of his two-day conference with Europe's other leading dictator, Benito Mussolini, left by plane early today for Berlin.

Ending what may prove to be one of the momentous meetings of history, Hitler and Mussolini said a cordial farewell at the airport here at 8 a. m., as massed thousands of Fascist troops cheered.

AUSTRIA PROTECTED

Observers listed results of their conversations, on which the world's hope of disarmament was pinned, as follows:

1—Austria, despite Nazi leanings, must remain an independent nation, one of Italy's primary aims. In return Mussolini agreed to "lay off" if a Nazi were elected Chancellor of Austria.

2—Official sources said no definite agreement was reached as to disarmament, although the primary object of the meeting was presumably for Mussolini to induce Germany to return to the League of Nations and the Disarmament Conference.

3—Germany will be invited to join the Italo-Austro-Hungarian economic accord, a move expected to promote peace in Central Europe.

4—Conversations, an Italian spokesman said, opposed regional blocs in favor of general co-operation.

Italian and German circles have agreed that the colloquies between their respective leaders went far beyond the scope originally planned, obtaining results which will have a far-reaching effect upon Europe, particularly Central Europe.

TO SPREAD FASCISM

One of the results these circles expect is a collaboration between the Fascist and Nazi propaganda bureaus to spread Fascism to other countries.

A brief and simple exchange of farewells marked the parting. There was little formality, although troops were drawn up at attention.

The farewell was more cordial than the greeting when the two met for the first time.

"Auf wiedersehn," said Mussolini. Hitler responded, saluted and shook hands.

When the plane started the dictators waved to each other. The draft of the propeller drove Mussolini and other high Italian officials back.

Old World Goes For Diet of Moratoriums

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Looks like the old world is going in for a diet of moratoriums. American bankers now realize the Young plan was merely trading flotsam for jetsam.

Every lobster over there has lost a claw. Only little Finland is turning over its pay envelope every Saturday night.

The Berlin skid is no surprise. You cannot keep cash in your pockets when you insist on standing on your head.

The sheared lambs now threaten to clip the barber. England and France are steaming up some happy trade reprisals.

The only people talking to each other in Europe right now are the diplomats. And they get paid for it.

Weir Attacks Unions, Codes in Harvard Talk

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 16.—Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation, maintains his two-fold attack on industrial codes and unionization, in the face of action by the steel workers convention in Pittsburgh.

Weir, a storm center of government-labor controversy since the advent of the National Recovery Act, told the Harvard Business School Alumni Association here last night:

"Any step that would force the workers of the country into labor organizations of one kind, and force industry to deal with labor organizations of one kind would be the most dangerous and eventually the most regretted step in our nation's history."

Intimating that Senator Wagner's proposed "labor disputes" bill would set up a "tyranny of labor leaders," Weir declared:

"It is common knowledge that many unions are controlled by machine politics of the most viscious sort, and that their supreme authority rests with a small group of officers who perpetuate themselves in office.

"It is my sincere belief that the true solution to the problem of employe relationships is the representation plan (termed company unions by labor leaders), because its foundation is, and must be, peace in industry."

possessing the extraordinary peculiarity of honesty.

OUR ENGLISH friends, welching as cheerfully as ever did a bookmaker in a loud checked suit on derby day, utter indignant moans when Germany announces a six months' moratorium. London expects Neville Chamberlain, British chancellor of the exchequer, "to urge the impounding of German trade balances."

That might suggest an idea to this country. Our British, French, Italian and other friends must have considerable balances of various sorts here, including quantities of "earmarked" gold. We might, but probably shall not, borrow Neville Chamberlain's idea. In statesmanship, ours seems to be a turn-the-other-cheek country, with a habit of taking things in a recumbent position.

MORE BOMBS sent in Paris, presumably a maniac, who signs "the three judges of hell," the latest addressed to Citroen, most important French automobile maker. It was opened by his secretary, whose hands were severely torn.

French detectives, famous throughout the world, are not to be criticized for their inability, thus far, to capture the supposed maniac, whose only motive appears to be hatred of the French people.

Where there is no definite motive for crime, detection is difficult.

MANY FOREIGN countries show a disposition to settle political questions with bullets or bombs. Even in England, usually free from violence, followers of Mosley, leader of a small band of British fascists, declare that communists planned to murder him. In Poland, the minister of the interior, Bronislav Pieracki, shot three times yesterday, will die.

In this country, usually content to talk about politics without shooting, we must not boast, since we have three presidents murdered, Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley, and attempts, that happily failed, to shoot both the Roosevelt presidents.

THE ONLY good news of the threatening dangerous steel strike comes from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. Wisely conservative, he knows it would be harmful, as prosperity starts coming back, to rip the country wide open with a disastrous strike, or putting organized labor in the position of defying the government and flouting its effort to restore prosperity.

He advises against a strike, suggesting a board of three, to be appointed by the President, to mediate, conciliate and insure collective bargaining.

NEW YORK STATE drinks fifteen million, seven hundred thousand gallons of liquor a year, and collects taxes on only six million, two hundred thousand gallons. Relief Clerk Ends Life In North Side Library

The Coroner's office today was endeavoring to establish a motive for the reported suicide of William McCulley, 21, of 651 Tingley avenue, Bellevue, in the North Side Carnegie Library, Federal and Ohio streets, last night.

McCulley, a clerk at the North Side branch of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board, Sandusky street, fired a bullet into his right temple as he sat in the mezzanine reading room, police said. Other readers, startled by the report of the shot, found him slumped in the chair. Albert Wood, of 502 Cedar avenue, ran across the street to the North Side Police Stotion and informed police.

McCulley was taken to Allegheny General Hospital, where he was pronounced dead. In his brief case police found a stanza copied from the "Kashmiri Song." It read:

"Pale hands I loved beside the Shalimar,
Where are you now who lies beneath your spell?
Whom do you lead on rapture's roadway far
Before you agonize them in farewell?"

Library employes said McCulley was a frequent visitor. Apparently in a nervous state, he walked in and out of the library building three [illegible] night, police said.

The [illegible] with one [illegible] and [illegible] loaded [illegible] homicide [illegible] on the [illegible] end of the [illegible] were [illegible]es. Relatives declined [illegible]ss the alleged act.

MRS. DALL NERVOUS AS TRAIN SPEEDS HER TO RENO DIVORCE

FAMILY KNOWS PLANS, SHE REVEALS

Roosevelt's Daughter 'Not Running Away;' Decries Publicity

OMAHA, Neb., June 16.—(AP.)—Anna Roosevelt Dall, daughter of the President, sped today toward Reno and a divorce.

In an exclusive interview on her train last night, the blond matron who has been a resident of the White House with her father and mother, confirmed reports that the primary purpose of her journey was to begin proceedings against her broker-husband, Curtis B. Dall. She said:

"I can't say positively that I'm going to get a divorce. Many things might arise. I don't believe any woman can say such a thing definitely."

'BUZZIE' HAS COLD

"Buzzie" is ill with a cold, she said, and she had spent an almost sleepless night watching over him en route from Washington to Chicago.

Mrs. Dall has leased a home near Lake Tahoe, she said, through an agent and plans to establish residence in Nevada. She has not retained an attorney, she said.

In her discussion, she compared her situation to that of her brother, Elliott, who was divorced last July at Minden, Nev., and married Miss Ruth Cowins, of Fort Worth, Tex., less than two weeks later at Burlington, Ia. She said:

"There is little reason why the private life of any person should be exposed to the glare of publicity."

Then she added:

"But I guess I'm up against the same thing Elliott was when he divorced and remarried."

With little hesitation Mrs. Dall made it plain that the divorce proceedings were anything but pleasant to her.

"It's rather hard for anyone to say he or she is going to Reno to get a divorce."

She said in a low voice as her fingers played nervously with the white starched cuff on her blue silk dress:

"We may want a divorce but there are any number of things to consider. It's easy to start off—but rather hard to carry through."

NOT RUNNING AWAY

Only her family knew of her plans, she said, and added that she believed very few persons knew that she had left Washington.

She said she arrived in Chicago yesterday and made no attempt to conceal her identity or that of her children. She explained:

"I left the train and went to see some friends and then came back and got on again. I wasn't running away from anyone."

115 POLICEMEN CHANGE POSTS

Four lieutenants, two turnkeys and 109 patrolmen late yesterday were shifted in one of the most extensive police transfers in recent years.

It was the first time in years politics apparently played no part in a shakeup. Recently, Public Safety Director A. Marshall Bell announced the police inspectors, responsible for police efficiency in their respective districts, would be permitted to select their men. Each inspector was said to have done this.

At Central Station, Lieut. Dennis Hennessy was assigned to night duty, exchanging places with George Schmotzer. Night Lieut. Albert Florig was transferred to the Traffic Division. He was replaced by Lieut. Albertus Keller.

Child Dead in Sharon's Mystery and the Family That Mourns

LEAH MINERVA DILLEY . . . SHARON'S LONG-MISSING CHILD

Leah, whose mysterious disappearance today was clearing up in the investigation of the story that police reported was told them by Homer Sanders, 45, former school teacher: that she had been found dead in a house he fumigated, then was carried to a field and her little body stealthily cremated.

GEORGE DILLEY AND THE MEMBERS OF HIS FAMILY . . . ONE OF HIS NINE CHILDREN DIED IN SHARON'S MYSTERY

4 OF 5 BABIES OVER 2 POUNDS

CORBEIL, Ont., June 16.—(AP.)—Four of the Dionne quintuplets have passed the two pound mark in weight and the other, Marie, weighed 31½ ounces.

Each of the little girls showed a gain and Dr. A. R. Dafoe expressed satisfaction with the condition of all of them.

The 24-year-old mother, Mrs. Ovila Dionne, also was reported in better condition although Dr. Dafoe said that she probably will be kept in bed for two weeks.

A comparison of the weights today and those of June 4, when the first accurate weighing took place, showed that Marie had gained more than any of her sisters.

SAC CITY, Ia., June 16.—(AP.)—The Wycoff quadruplets carried added ounces last night, the gains encouraging Dr. G. H. Swearingen in the belief they are improving steadily.

The weighing-in showed all four of the babies, born last Saturday to Mrs. Larry Wycoff, had put on a few ounces. They were taking more of their corn syrup, milk and water diet.

Rail Crossing Crash Kills 2 Boys

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 16.—(AP.)—Two youths were killed and another injured seriously last night as a train struck their sport roadster at the Tarr crossing of the Southwest branch, Pennsylvania Railroad, 10 miles south of Greensburg.

John Yadamec, 19, and Robert Lombardi, 17, of Hunker, near Greensburg, were the victims. Clarence Geckle, 18, owner of the car, received a fractured skull and was taken to a Mt. Pleasant hospital. He lives in Hunker also.

Coroner's office attaches said the crossing is unprotected by a watchman or safety gate.

MODEST STAGE AWAITS LIBBY

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—(AP.)—Mrs. Elizabeth Holman Reynolds returns to the stage tonight—a stage not precisely the same that made Libby Holman famous, nor a role like those of yesteryear, when she "wowed 'em" with torch songs.

Libby is making her bow in serious dramatics. It is her first stage appearance since she became a central figure in a series of occurrences that included the death of her husband, Smith Reynolds, tobacco fortune heir.

The scene of Libby's emergence from private life is the Hedgerow Playhouse, model home of one of the country's surviving repertory theaters, nestled in Rose Valley, a 10-mile jaunt from this city.

Her vehicle is the Spanish play, Sierra's "Spring in Autumn," but she will have neither a starring role nor a big audience, both of which are just a few of the things to which she had been accustomed.

Libby will appear as Pura, the maid to an opera singer. If there's a full house, only 168 seated patrons of the Hedgerow Players will be looking on.

MILL OFFICIAL DIES IN CRASH

R. E. Browning, of 807 Ninth street, Bridgeville, an official of the Universal Steel Company, Bridgeville, was fatally injured early today when his auto struck a pole between Hostetlerg and Bridgeville, police reported. He died in Allegheny County Hospital at Woodville.

Joseph Shandor, 30, of Library, suffered a possible skull fracture early today when autos driven by Peter Maura, 38, of 1911 Edgebrook avenue, and Philip Berger, 26, Library, collided at Saw Mill Run boulevard and Noble Lane, police reported. Shandor was riding with Berger.

Walter Bracken, a traffic policeman, was struck by an automobile at Ohio River boulevard and Superior avenue late yesterday while gathering information on another automobile accident at that point. Police said Bracken was hit by a machine driven by Cyril Green, 29, of 561 North Neville street. He was taken to Mercy Hospital and Green to the Woods Run Police Station, where a reckless driving charge was placed against him.

MATE'S FOREIGN DIVORCE BALKED

Judge George V. Moore has granted Elizabeth Leiding, of 818 Walnut street, Edgewood, a permanent injunction restraining her husband, Elmer C. Leiding, from proceeding with a Mexican divorce action against her.

In her petition, Mrs. Leiding accused her husband, an electrical draftsman, of lavishing most of his income on another woman and of planning to marry the latter if he obtains a decree from his present wife, with whom he has lived for 31 years.

Judge Moore also enjoined Leiding from participating in any divorce proceedings against his wife in any state in the country except Pennsylvania.

Margaret Marshall Gets Damage Award

Mrs. Margaret G. Marshall, widow of the late Attorney Rody P. Marshall, and her daughter, Mary Margaret Marshall, have been awarded a verdict for $1,972 in Common Pleas Court against George A. A. Hollander, 7166 Willard street, for injuries received by Miss Marshall in an automobile accident. Hollander did not defend the action. The latter's car ran into a car driven by Miss Marshall on Frankstown road, November 1, 1931, injuring Miss Marshall's left arm.

Passavant Hospital Graduates 5 Nurses

Five nurses were given diplomas as the annual commencement exercises of the Passavant Hospital school for nursing last night in the First Evangelical Lutheran Church. Prof. David Rumstine was commencement speaker. In the class were: Caroline Elizabeth Beaman, Turtle Creek; Eleanor Leontine Jatlik, Brownsville; Mildred Marian Masters, Pittsburgh; Sarah Elizabeth Clark, Apollo, and Mary Frances Yutzy, Oakland.

Passerby Struck As Couple Battle

Frank Smith, 43, of 804 Cedar avenue, innocent victim of a quarrel between a man and his wife, was treated at Allegheny General Hospital early today for lacerations.

Smith told police he was walking in Sixth avenue, near Penn, when he overheard a man and his wife quarreling in an automobile. As he passed the man leaped from the machine, hurled a bottle at the auto. The bottle hit Smith.

Turtle Creek Man Holdup Victim

Two men held up H. J. Balmer, of 1007 Oak avenue, Turtle Creek, in Sheridan avenue, East Liberty, early today and escaped with $13.

Hotelman, 2 Others Arrested in Raid

Downtown police early today arrested Joseph Hamaler, 55, at the Carr Hotel, 328 Penn avenue, on a charge of keeping a disorderly house. A man and woman were arrested as visitors.

Pittsburgh Visitor Victim of Holdup

Trigg Reese, of Pricedale, a Pittsburgh visitor, reported to police early today that two Negroes had held him up at Elm and Whitcomb streets and escaped with a watch valued at $40 and $16 in cash.

Tronzo Appointed Mayor's File Clerk

Al Tronzo, Democratic nominee for Legislature in the First District, has been appointed file clerk in the Mayor's office, succeeding John C. Davis, who was recently named chief clerk in Morals Court.

MUTE EXPLAINS KILLING SISTER

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—(AP.)—Police today held Charles Schrager, 38-year-old deaf mute, for crushing the head of his sister with a claw hammer.

Miss Helen Schrager, 35, the sister, who had cared for him for years, died without knowing what had happened. Schrager, held for murder, told police he believes she was asleep when he attacked her. He told Ray Bowen, a policeman:

"I believe she was not in her right mind. I have noticed Sister Helen acting very funny lately, and I thought it best to put her out of the way."

Schrager, unable to speak orally, made that and other statements in penciled notes.

Beautified Plot Dedicated to City

Dedication of the triangular lot at Sixth avenue and Grant street, opposite the William Penn Hotel, recently beautified by employes of May-Stern Company, was to be made to the city today by Leo Lehman, manager of the company, Mayor William N. McNair, members of Council and members of the City Planning and Art Commissions were to attend. The plot was designed by Henry Hornbostel, architect.

DROWNED BABY, SAYS BOY, 10

CLEVELAND, June 16.—(AP.)—A 10-year-old boy's story of drowning Peggy Young, 3, in the Cuyahoga River set coast guards to dragging the murky stream today for her body.

Picked up by police on the street after the girl had been reported missing, the boy sat calmly in a police car at a precinct station and declared he and a 14-year-old companion were responsible. He told police:

"We went to the river. We made her lie down on the cinders close to the river bank. Then we all walked to the river.

"My pal asked Peggy if she could swim. She said she couldn't. Then I pushed her in the water. She came up right away, kicking her arms and legs.

"My pal picked up a half a brick and threw it at her. It hit her in the stomach and she went down and didn't come up any more."

Woman Killed Crossing Tracks

Mrs. Stella Thomas, 38, Negro, of 312 Braddock avenue, Braddock, was instantly killed when struck by a westbound passenger train of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at a crossing between First and Second streets, Braddock, early today, the morgue reported.

Eileen's Mother Bares Astor Apology to World

NEW YORK, June 16.—(AP.)—Young John Jacob Astor's apology to his former fiancee, Eileen Gillespie—the apology in exchange for which he received back the $100,000 diamond engagement ring he had given Miss Gillespie—was made public today by the young woman's mother, Mrs. Lawrence Lewis Gillespie.

Said Mrs. Gillespie in the latest statement in the sharp verbal exchange over the broken romance:

"In reported interviews to the press Mr. John Jacob Astor seems to cause some doubt as to the quality of his apology."

The following, Mrs. Gillespie said, is the text of the letter which the Astor scion gave to Miss Gillespie last Monday and received, in return, the ring:

"Dear Miss Gillespie: I willingly withdraw anything I may have said to — in the corridor of the Savoy-Plaza Hotel on Sunday, January 21, 1934, which may have hurt you, and I apologize.

"I assure that if I have occasion to speak or write of you or your family it will be only with respect, for as you know, I have always held you in the highest esteem.

"Sincerely,

"J. J. Astor."

Mrs. Gillespie's statement concluded:

"It is not desired that any further discussion on this subject shall ensue."

An Astor spokesman had said yesterday that the wealthy young man was indignant over previous statements issued by the Gillespies and was on the point of disclosing the apology himself.

Own Children Toasted Marshmallows at Girl's Cremation

gence and recommended that he be held for action by the court.

In addition to the charge of involuntary manslaughter confronting the engineer, Sanders faced possible charges of illegally destroying a body and concealing a death, according to Chief Charles B. Steger, of the Sharon police, who directed the inquiry that led to Sanders' arrest yesterday.

The arrest came as a startling climax to the mysterious disappearance of the little girl, who had been missing since June 3, two weeks ago.

SLEEPLESS NIGHT

Sanders, after a sleepless night, was still cheerful today, although unshaven and appearing tired. He shook hands with newspapermen and said:

"Well, boys, you're talking to a man who's had a lot of tough luck. I don't know why I did it. I guess I just lost my head."

Sanders then asked whether his mother-in-law had arrived from Pittsburgh. He refused to name her.

State, county and city police had joined in dragging the Shenango River and combing the countryside for the missing girl.

They had virtually abandoned their search when a missing quilt provided the clue that led to Sanders' arrest.

During the widespread search for Leah, Sanders became a member of an emergency committee from the American Legion which volunteered to aid in looking for the missing child.

Mrs. George Gregg, of Andrews street, whose home Sanders had fumigated, while talking with neighbors told of a quilt missing from her home.

Her niece, Mrs. Edith Hepler, who lives next door, recalled that on the day Sanders fumigated the home, June 3, she saw him leaving the house carrying a bundle in a quilt.

EX-SOLDIER FAINTS

He fainted when Detective William Thomas mentioned the quilt. Sanders into custody.

His confession followed quickly, police said.

He eagerly led the authorities to the wooded glen, three miles from Sharon, off the Sharpsville road, where he had built the pyre, police said.

He pointed out the ashes, in which Coroner W. J. Applegate found several fragments of charred bones.

Sanders told police he had found Leah lying dead on the living-room floor of the Gregg home when he had returned to air the house after the fumigation.

The police believe the child, who lived across the street and had frequently played at the Greggs' home, pushed open the front door and wandered in, almost instantly succumbing to the lethal fumes.

PARTY AROUND PYRE

Sanders, alarmed by his unexpected discovery, he told police, seized the quilt, wrapped it around the child, and carried her out to his car.

Finishing his work, his statement read, he drove home, placed the body, still wrapped in the quilt, in his garage and had dinner with his own four motherless children.

After dinner Sanders took the body to the secluded spot in the country and hid it in a brush pile, he told police. He returned home, he said, and not long afterward he asked his children if they would like to go for a marshmallow toasting.

All but Loraine, 13, the eldest, wanted to go.

Reaching the country, the father hurried ahead and ignited the brush pile while the children were clambering over a fence, he told police.

STANDS BY SILENTLY

He had brought along some garbage to burn.

The police said he did this to disguise any stench from the flames.

Mr. and Mrs. George Dilley sat within an arm's reach of Sanders during the inquest.

Leah's mother sobbed throughout the testimony.

Her husband maintained a grim silence.

After the inquest Sanders remarked, police said:

"I had thought my bad breaks were over, but it looks as though they had started again. My time's probably up."

BEEN THROUGH A LOT

He was asked how he had managed to keep silent amid the furore that followed the disappearance of the girl. He is reported to have replied:

"I've been through a lot and my conscience is calloused."

Sanders added:

Sanders, a graduate on engineering of Bucknell College, has lived in Sharon for 10 years. He was an engineer for the Westinghouse plant here until 2 years ago when he was laid off shortly before his wife died. A month later his home was destroyed by fire.

Recently Sanders had obtained work at the American Steel and Wire Company plant at Farrell and in his spare time continued to do odd jobs such as fumigating and other work.

Model Builders' Course for Beginners; Lesson No. 9, Starting the Flier

By LAWRENCE SHAW
National Director

In our less today, in the Model Builders' Course for Beginners, we are ready to start construction of our all-Balsa low-wing flier. Having successfully completed our first glider, we shall have no difficulty in building this fine propelled craft, which is similar in design, but incorporates such additional steps as the wing clips, which permit an adjustable wing, motor hooks which permit the use of a rubber motor and the carving of a propeller, which, of course, is necessary for a propelled model.

We begin the construction of this model just as we did our glider, by building the wings, tail units and motor stick, and the work is the same except for the difference in the sizes of their members. The all-Balsa low-wing flier is a larger model than our first all-Balsa glider.

Cutting Out The Wings

Take the piece of Balsa sheet one-sixteenth (1-16) by two and one-quarter (2¼) by eighteen (18) inches and round off the tips, with a razor blade, as shown in diagram "A" published in today's column. Then sandpaper the surfaces and edges of your wing.

That is all there is to the wing except to give it dihedral angle. Follow the same method as was published with the directions for building the all-Balsa glider, except that a two-inch block or book is placed under each wing tip. This model requires a wing with a two-inch dihedral instead of one inch.

Remember, all you have to do is measure nine inches in from each wing tip, with your razor make an impression from leading edge to trailing edge (front to back along width) and then split, but do not break off, your two wing sections. Place a two-inch block under each wing tip, press down on the split line and apply glue. Hold center down with a weight until dried and then you have a permanent dihedral angle in your wing which will make it look like a shallow "V."

Constructing Stabilizer

The rudder is the upright member of the tail unit and the stabilizer the flat member. These two members are cut from the one-thirty-second (1-32) by two (2) by twelve (12) inch Balsa sheet.

By following the measurements of the stabilizer given in diagram "A" in today's column, you should have no difficulty for it is cut out of your Balsa sheet the same way that the stabilizer for your glider was.

Note that the stabilizer is but seven and one-half inches in length, while your piece of Balsa sheet is 12 inches long. Three and one-half inches of this sheet of Balsa is needed for your rudder, which will be described in the next lesson appearing in this column on Monday, so be sure that you save what is left over.

In our next lesson I will also tell you how to construct the motor stick, and cut out the wheels. After that we will have a lesson in propeller carving and then another in the making of wire fittings such as the landing gear, motor hooks and wing clips, etc.

Be sure that you follow this course carefully. It really isn't difficult to build a model if you make no false steps.

ARMY AIR INSIGNIAS

Tomorrow we will publish the first of a series of official United States Army Air Corps insignas. This will comprise the most complete set of insignias ever published. Be sure you keep these valuable authentic drawings for your scrap books.

Scientist Churches Announce Theme

"God, the Preserver of Man" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text will be: "As birds flying, so will the Lord of hosts defend Jerusalem; defending also he will deliver it; and passing over he will preserve it."

Junior Patrol

Learn to be good letter writers, fellows!

So many people can't write a good letter.

They want to write what they think, or tell their friend about something that has happened or is going to happen, but they don't know how to write the words. They can talk about it, but they can't write it.

Probably the best letters are written just the way you talk to a friend. And some of the best literature ever written is found in letters men and women have written.

We would like to have every Junior Patrol member be a good letter writer. Maybe you can already write a swell letter, and you don't need to learn. But if you have any doubts about it, try this.

First, get a piece of plain paper; now think, what did you do yesterday? What are you going to do today? What are you going to do tomorrow? What is new at your house?

Then tell the friend to whom you are writing about these things. Maybe you saw a picture show. Tell what the name of the picture was, who the stars were, what they did, and whether it was sad or funny. And tell what you thought about the picture. Did it remind you of some people you know? Did you see some scenery in the picture that you have really seen yourself? Would you like to be as rich as the hero—or as poor as the heroine?

Maybe your Junior Patrol had an interesting meeting. Write to your friend and tell what happened—just as it happened. Learn to see things and remember things you see and hear so that you can write about them.

And as you write your letter, try to write just as plainly and vividly as you can. Don't take phrases out of books and put them into your letter—learn to say things your own way, differently from the ordinary way.

That's the way we would like to have secretaries for patrols write to us. Try it, will you, fellows?

NEWS ABOUT CHURCH ACTIVITIES HERE

Church Speaker

DR. BERNARD C. CLAUSEN

The Rev. Dr. Clausen of the First Baptist church, speaker for the first of the union church services at Carnegie Music Hall, Oakland.

Bishop Boyle Gives Diplomas to Twelve

Twelve graduates of Ursuline Academy received their diplomas from Bishop Hugh C. Boyle, of the Pittsburgh Catholic diocese, at commencement exercises in the school auditorium last night. Miss Louise Leslie Pace was awarded the class excellence prize, and prizes for application in music were presented to Miss Marcia Justice and Miss Mildred Shenkan.

CHURCHES OPEN UNION RITES TOMORROW

During the summer many districts are combining their evening church services into union meetings. In this way a spiritual kinship is built up among the various denominations, at the same time the scope of the service's influence is broadened.

At 8 p. m. tomorrow 24 churches will participate in the opening of the seventeenth season of the Community Church services in Carnegie Music Hall. Dr. Bernard C. Clausen, of the First Baptist Church, will preach the initial sermon, "Aspirin Religion."

Churches included in the community group are the Asbury Methodist Episcopal, the Bellefield Presbyterian, the Carmel Presbyterian, the Central Christian, the Christ Methodist Episcopal, the Church of the Ascension, Church of the Brethern, the First Baptist, the Emory Methodist Episcopal (only during August), the First Evangelical, the First Methodist Protestant, and the First United Presbyterian.

Also co-operating are the Grace Reformed, the Herron Avenue Presbyterian, the Mary S. Brown Memorial Methodist Episcopal, the Oakland Methodist Episcopal, the Oakland Presbyterian, Shady Avenue Presbyterian, Shadyside Presbyterian, Shadyside United Presbyterian, Sixth Presbyterian, Squirrel Hill Methodist Protestant, the Schenley Heights Methodist Episcopal and the Third United Presbyterian.

The Story of Salome CHAPTER III

Told in Pictures By DAN SMITH

When Herod told Salome, who had pleased him by her dancing, that he would grant whatever she might ask, she doubted, until Herod gave her a pledge.

So Herod made oath to Salome and swore unto her, "Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me, I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom." And it pleased Salome.

Then Salome went forth to her mother, Herodias, who had caused John the Baptist to be thrown into prison because he said it was not lawful for Herod to take her as his wife, and told her of the king's pledge and said, "What shall I ask?" And Herodias told Salome to ask Herod to give her the head of John the Baptist.

TEACHER UNION CALLED 'RED'

International News Service.

COLUMBUS, O., June 16.—Charges that the American Federation of Teachers, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, was a Communist organization were made here yesterday by the Americaneers, a patriotic group.

Disclosing the results of a long investigation, the Americaneers, alleged that communists were using the teachers' organization "as a means of fermenting and spreading anti-American propaganda in the nation's schools."

The statement added:

"Many teachers apparently have shown no inclination to affiliate with the American Federation of Teachers but teachers in various Ohio communities, principally in Cleveland, Toledo, Akron, Springfield and Wood and Morrow counties have joined the organization."

Robert Sherwood Sues for Divorce

He charged extreme cruelty. They were married in 1922 and have a daughter, 10. Sherwood requested a private trial.

PITTSBURGHERS AT OHIO MEET

Five Pittsburghers are to take part in the program of the home mission congress of the United Presbyterian Church of North America now in session at Western College, Oxford, O. They are Dr. J. C. Broomfield, the Rev. H. Ray Shear, the Rev. R. W. Gibson, Dr. J. A. Alexander, Dr. A. J. Randles and Mrs. R. A. Hutchison.

The congress will take up the first four days of the general assembly of the denomination which opened last night for a 10-day session. Chief among the questions to be discussed is the union of the United Presbyterian and the Presbyterian churches. Since the Presbyterian Church, the larger of the two, has already voted for the merger, the decision of the assembly will be of great importance.

Another group of Pittsburghers, the Home Mission Quartet will furnish special music at the meetings. The quartet is composed of the Rev. J. Hoy McElhinney, the Rev. Clyde H. Canfield, the Rev. W. R. McGeary and the Rev. G. D. McCalmont.

Chicago Man Named Master Mechanic

E. W. Smith, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, today announced the appointment of D. K. Chase as master mechanic of the Pittsburgh division. Chase has been an employe of the railroad since 1913, when he first worked as a messenger in Philadelphia. He leaves a position as master mechanic in Chicago, which will be filled by C. O. Shull, assistant master mechanic of the Pittsburgh division. Mr. Shull's successor will be E. R. Buck, now engine house foreman at Cape Charles, Va.

SYNOD MEETS ON MONDAY

The Rev. Dr. Henry H. Bagger, of Edgewood, president, will open the ninety-second annual convention of the Pittsburgh Synod of the United Lutheran Church of America, in New Kensington, with a sermon on "Strengthening the Life of the Church," at 4 p. m., Monday. In the evening the business sessions will open with officers' reports.

In connection with the synodical convention, the brotherhood of the synod will hold its convention Wednesday afternoon and evening. Among the speakers will be the Rev. Dr. W. H. Greever, of New York City, secretary of the United Lutheran Church.

Thursday evening ordination of candidates for the ministry will take place, while at the business sessions secretaries and a treasurer will be elected.

Barber Price War Continues at Avalon

Haircuts were being offered for 15 cents today in Avalon as the borough's barbers continued their battle for business. Though Burgess Grant Ritchie attempted to halt the price warfare at a meeting he arranged yesterday, the difficulties remained unsettled when the conference ended.

Wilkinsburg Voters Re-elect McGregor

Coroner W. J. McGregor was re-elected chairman of the Wilkinsburg Republican County Committee at a meeting of the organization last night. Other officers named are Mrs. Mabel Meyer, vice chair

COLLEGE MEETS ON AIR

Gus Edwards, Fritzi Scheff On WCAE

Four full hour broadcasts including a description of the Poughkeepsie regatta, have been slated for nation-wide networks with local relay tonight.

The thrilling intercollegiate trek down the Hudson, with Columbia, Cornell, Pennsylvania, Navy, Syracuse, Washington and California crews competing, will go on the air via WJAS-KDKA at 7:30.

A detailed account of the long grind will be wafted direct from the observation train, with Graham McNamee, stationed aboard the official float, taking the microphone for a description of the finish.

Another hour goes to Princeton's invitation track meet, scheduled contestants for which include some of the country's most celebrated track stars. The report has been booked by WCAE beginning at 5 p. m.

* * *

A microphone reunion of famed theatrical stars of yesterday, reviewing their best-loved roles and scenes, has been spotted at 10:30 on WCAE with DeWolf Hopper, Fritzi Scheff, Gus Edward, Cissie Loftus, Donald Brian and Ethel Jackson scheduled to take the air.

The latter two will offer a scene from "Merry Widow;" Hopper, his famous "Casey at the Bat;" Miss Scheff, selections from "Mlle. Modiste," and Cissie Loftus, impersonations of other stars of the day, with Gus Edwards as master of ceremonies.

* * *

Also on the slate are the first of a four-a-week summer series of hour concerts by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, playing from the Century of Progress Exposition, and a brief talk by Admiral Joseph Mason Reeves, who yesterday became commander-in-chief of the fleet.

The orchestra presents its inaugural concert over WJAS at 9:30. Admiral Reeves' address is scheduled for 15 minutes on NBC-WCAE at 9:15.

Globe-Trotter Time Change

Attention of listeners is called to a change of time listing of the Globe-Trotter's afternoon broadcasts next Monday and Wednesday.

On those days only he will go on the air at 3 p. m., instead of 2:15, in order to facilitate WCAE relay of network broadcasts from the American Federation of Advertisers convention in New York.

Reunion

Fritzi Scheff comes to the air with five others of old-time theatrical fame in a special WCAE program at 10:30 tonight.

Lanny Ross To Remain On Air

By AIRCASTER

"Showboat," despite published reports, will not change its type of entertainment or routine and, incidentally, will retain Lanny Ross as its romantic star, permitting him to build a bit of a show around himself when he goes to Hollywood next month. There will be a two-way wire which will obviate any awkwardness in cutting Lanny in and out of the New York studio.

Lanny has decided to stick with radio, instead of deserting it for pictures, but will make two films before returning East for a long run with "Showboat," starting officially in October and continuing until the following October. Between now and the autumn there is a gentleman's agreement between the singer and patron regarding his continuance with the Thursday night show.

Ross Evans is a young postman of East Paterson, N. J., and he thinks it is rather foolish for a postman to conform to the old tradition by walking over his route on a holiday. Instead of that, Mr. Evans has been visiting radio studios on his days off and getting a few pointers on singing.

In the course of these travels he met Ralph Kirbery, who took an interest in him and discovered that the postman could sing as well as ring twice.

Possibly Evans won't be a postman much longer. He makes his radio debut on NBC's "Airbreaks" next Friday.

Globe Trotter

Hello, Neighbors:

The new title is in honor of the contest being conducted by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, the "Know Your Neighbor" contest.

It's been running now for a couple of days and by this time the Globe Trotters ought to be more neighborly than ever.

* * *

When Chief Big Bear was on the radio yesterday he explained to the Globe Trotters the meaning of various Indian dances, but, above all, he let us in on a secret. He told us how it happened that there are so many Indian "chiefs."

When I asked him how long he had been a chief, he modestly admitted that real chiefs never leave the reservation. He explained that the chief today is just a figurehead, a memorial to the days gone by, and the only time that the chief plays an important role in tribe life is in the conducting of ancient ceremonial or ritualistic dances.

Chief Big Bear said:

"My name is Big Bear, but every white man who wants to inquire about an Indian always ask, 'Where are you from, Chief?' and that is how so many Indians off the reservation get to be known as chiefs."

Far from detracting from Big Bear's Globe Trotter broadcast, the sincerity of that admission enhanced the value of his talk.

Six-year-old Ilo Jane Hancock has lost her playmate and sparring partner. His name is "Boots" and it's a black Persian cat with white feet and white whiskers (very unusual color combination), and belongs at 55 Bradford avenue, Crafton. Telephone, Walnut 3127-R.

Will the neighbors keep their eyes open? Being a sparring kitten it might have lit out for New York to see the fight.

BOGGS & BUHL

In Mayfair

—With—

Patricia Pitt

Pittsburgh can boast the oldest woman who is still composing music of note in the United States. She's Madame Kate Ockleston Lippa. She'll celebrate her eightieth birthday this year.

MME. LIPPA

Tonight a program of Mrs. Lippa's instrumental compositions and songs will be heard over KDKA at 8:30 o'clock. Included in the program will be three songs, the texts of which were written for Madame Lippa by her former pupil, Mrs. Harry B. Wassell.

Mrs. Wassel and Dr. Harvey Gaul, with the aid of the composer's friends, arranged the radio program, which will include a biographical sketch by Dr. Gaul.

The composer is the mother of one of Pittsburgh's most faithful supporters of music, Mrs. John M. Freeman, and the grandmother, by the way, of Evelyn Freeman, who was a debutante of the past fall.

Madame Lippa, who lives with the John M. Freemans in Ellsworth avenue, will leave Tuesday night for their summer home in Marblehead, Mass. The Freemans will join her the later part of the month, and Evelyn has left already.

Stork, as Well as Cupid, Is Busy These Days

The stork is busy these June days as well as Cupid. Several families are celebrating the arrival of new members.

The former Margaret Jarvis has a young son. The Frederick Redfield Weeds (she's Margaret Jarvis) of St. Mark's School, Southboro, Mass., announce the birth of a son, June 13, at the Richardson House.

The baby has been named Peter Redfield Weed. His mother is a daughter of the William R. Jarvises, of South Graham street, Pittsburgh. And Mrs. Jarvis is in the East to see her young grandson.

Two Pittsburgh Girls Chevy Chase Honor Students

The Rev. Dr. and Mrs. C. Marshall Muir, of the Bellefield Presbyterian Church, have a son, born yesterday afternoon in West Penn Hospital.

* * *

Two Pittsburgh girls were honor students of the year, according to announcements made at the class day exercises of the Chevy Chase Junior College and Senior High School, Washington, held Saturday, June 9.

They are Sarah Barnes McDowell, daughter of Mrs. Frank McDowell, of Morewood Gardens, who had the highest average of any student in the junior college, and Dorothy Belle Rundle, daughter of the Robert A. Rundles, of Maple avenue, Edgewood, who led the senior high school with a notably high average.

Take Leading Parts in Exercises Held at School

The Paul L. Griffithses have been at the Ambassador Hotel, New York, and the James McKays at the Weylin, New York.

Third Annual Children's Horse Show Held Today at John W. Lawrence Estate

This afternoon practically all boys and girls of the social registerite set are at the John W. Lawrences' wooded estate, "Hartwood," near Sharpsburg, for the third annual children's horse show, conducted by Pittsburgh's only children's hunt, the Hart's Run Junior Hunt.

Sixty boys and girls, from 6 to 16, will be exhibitors, and the remaining children and their elders will be spectators.

Mr. Lawrence One of Those Active on Ring Committee

John W. Lawrence, Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, T. J. Hilliard, Dr. Edward McCague and A. Rex Flinn are on the ring committee; Mrs. T. J. Hilliard is chairman of parking space; Mrs. Lawrence, program and trophies; Mrs. George M. Laughlin II, refreshments.

Kathryn Lutz, C. H. Friday To Wed

Miss Kathryn Lutz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lutz, of Sewickley Heights, has chosen June 26 as the date for her marriage to Charles H. Friday, son of Herman Friday and the late Henrietta E. Friday, of Crafton.

The ceremony will take place in St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, Glenfield, with the Rev. Anthony Lachowsky officiating. Miss Dorothy Lutz will be her sister's maid of honor and her fiance's sister, Miss Henrietta M. Friday, will be bridesmaid. John Lutz, Jr., will be best man and Elmer C. Speer, Jr., will usher.

There will be a wedding breakfast in the Lutz home. Mr. Friday and his fiancee plan a southern motor trip after which they will live in Crafton, about July 8.

Dorothy R. Ream Is Honored at Luncheon

Mrs. Paul Kesel, of Callowhill street, was hostess at a bridge luncheon for 24 guests in the College Club Thursday afternoon in honor of Miss Dorothy Rose Ream, daughter of Mrs. Harry M. Ream and the late H. M. Ream, of Marlboro road. Her engagement to Dr. Joseph C. Staley, son of Mr and Mrs. H. M. Staley, of South Pacific avenue, East End, was made known.

Both Miss Ream and her fiance are graduates of the University of Pittsburgh, where she was a Kappa Kappa Gamma. Dr. Staley, who also was graduated from the University of Pittsburgh medical school, is resident physician at Mercy Hospital.

Mrs. Fabian Staley, of New York, and Mrs. John C. Pangborn, of Sagerstown, were among the guests.

Daughters Aides At Alumnae Picnic

Ellis Alumnae Picnic Wednesday

The annual Ellis School Alumnae picnic is to be held Wednesday on the grounds of Miss Willa Guckert's home, Waldorf street, North Side. The new members of the June graduating class will be welcomed into the association at the picnic.

William S. Roe Court, No. 24, Order of the Amaranth, will hold a card party in Amaranth Temple, Arch street, Wednesday evening at 9 o'clock. Mrs. Anna M. Gregg is chairman.

Jewish Groups Will Have Dance

Ambridge Junior and Senior Councils of Jewish Women are holding their annual dance jointly in the Ambridge Country Club on Wednesday evening.

Oppose Gorskey Bid For Detective Job

Opposing the application of Sigmund Gorskey, former city detective, for a license as a private detective, unions affiliated with the A. F. of L. have charged that Gorskey's investigations of theater bombings are connected with "a strike-breakers' racket." Gorskey said he was working for the Motion Picture Owners of Western Pennsylvania, located on Van Braam street. Counsel for the opposition contended what they term a racket union with which Gorskey is connected has headquarters at the same address.

Ruth Margaret Kornman Becomes Bride of Earl T. Farley at Ceremony in Rochester

At 2 o'clock Monday afternoon in the Grace Lutheran Church, Rochester, Pa., Miss Ruth Margaret Kornman, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Otto Kornman and the late John Kornman, became the bride of Earl Tennyson Farley, son of the late William T. Farley and Mrs. Clara Farley, of Lewisburg, Pa. The bride chose as her wedding day her mother's wedding anniversary and birthday.

The Rev. H. Reed Shepfer officiated. The altar was decorated with cibotium ferns, Boston ferns and palms and vases and standards of white peonies, orange blossoms and five-branch candelabra. Miss Adele Workman played the organ and Ivan Ferguson, of Pittsburgh, cousin of the bride, played the violin. Miss Christiana Knoedler sang.

The bride wore a gown of white chiffon crepe with long sleeves and a jacket trimmed in white ermine. Her veil of net, with a full court train, cascaded from a cap of net caught with orange blossoms. She carried bridal roses and lilies of the valley. She was given in marriage by her uncle, Charles Kornman.

Miss Edith Kornman was her sister's maid of honor, and wore pink georgette made with a jacket having ruffled sleeves, and she wore a pink picture hat and lace mitts. Her bouquet was of Johanna Hill roses and pink larkspur. Fenton Farley, of Beaver Falls, was his brother's best man.

The bride had her four cousins as bridesmaids. They were Miss Ida Horst, Pittsburgh, who wore yellow organdie and carried sunset roses and white peonies; Miss Grace Grotefend, of Pittsburgh, in blue organdie, who carried pink roses and delphinium; Miss Mary Kornman, of Freedom, whose frock was of peach organdie and who carried Talisman roses and pink peonies, and Miss Clara Keck, of Mars, who chose green organdie and carried premier supreme roses and white peonies. They all wore wide-brimmed hats to match their dresses. The bride's mother appeared in ashes of roses georgette and lace with a white lace hat and corsage of Johanna Hill roses.

Ushers were Howard Horst, of Pittsburgh; Gayle Chaffin, Midland; Roy Williams, Beaver, and Herbert Ostrander, of Rochester.

The reception was held in the Penn-Beaver Hotel for 23 guests. The bridal table was decorated with spring flowers and white tapers.

After a honeymoon in Washington, Lewisburg, and the East, Mr. and Mrs. Farley will be at home in Pennsylvania avenue, Rochester. The bride is a graduate of Dr. Little's Conservatory of Music where she received her master's degree, and she teaches music and plays the organ in Beaver Methodist Church. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh. He teaches in the Rochester Junior High School.

Sullivan Nuptials Take Place in Homewood

Miss Helen Sullivan and John J. Cain were married in the Holy Rosary Roman Catholic Church, Homewood, on Monday morning at 8 o'clock with the Rev. Thomas Sullivan officiating.

The bride wore white and carried Johanna Hill roses, and her cousin, Miss Kay Boyle, was maid of honor and wore powder blue with pink accessories and carried pink roses and blue delphinium. Francis Cain was his brother's best man.

After the breakfast in the Penn-Lincoln Hotel Mr. and Mrs. Cain left for the World's Fair and upon their return will live in Wilkinsburg.

Women of Moose Elect Officers

O. E. S. Arranges Rummage Sale

A rummage sale is to be conducted Tuesday at Broad street and Larimer avenue, East Liberty, by Mizpah Chapter, No. 49, Order of the Eastern Star. Next Saturday afternoon the chapter will have a dessert bridge at Mrs. T. M. McLenahan's home in Greenfield avenue.

Sorority to Hold Convention

The national Chi Omega convention will be held June 22 to 29 at Buck Hill Falls, Pocono Mountains. The two Pittsburgh delegates are Miss Helen Crozier and Miss Wonnetah Parks, from the University of Pittsburgh. The convention will terminate in a Pan-Hellenic house party in New York.

Y. W. C. A. Camp Activities Are Under Way

Although July and August are the most popular months for camping, Carondowanna, the Y. W. C. A. camp, has already launched upon a busy season of activities. Since Ben Avon Girl Reserves wanted to go to camp together, and many of them will shortly be leaving the city to spend their vacations with their families at various resorts, a three-day visit was arranged for 40 of them this week. Miss Katherine Mason, the newly-elected president of the Ben Avon Girl Reserve Club, was a member of the group.

This morning, about 30 members of an East Liberty Girl Reserve club and the Westminster Circle of the Highland Presbyterian Church, are driving out to camp for the week-end. They will do their own cooking and conduct a varied program including hiking, tennis, campfires, star stories, baseball and a worship service for tomorrow in "The Cathedral," a cleared space under the trees where a stone altar has been built.

On Tuesday the City-Wide Girl Reserve Committee will hold an all-day meeting at camp, the chairman, Mrs. A. P. Burchfield, presiding.

Juniors Planning To Organize in Swissvale

Thirty young women were entertained at tea yesterday by the executive board of the Swissvale Woman's Club and took first steps towards the formation of a junior section, with Miss Jean Stotler as temporary chairman. Organization will be effected Monday night. Mrs. Joseph M. Steim, State Federation chairman of juniors, spoke.

The seniors had their luncheon at the Pines on Thursday and for program Miss Marianne Genet presented Charlotte Shallenberger and Edward Dunbar in a recital of her compositions. Mark Meyer, with his sister, Miss Marjorie Meyer, accompanying, added violin solos.

Perry Women Meet Wednesday

Reports of committee chairmen will be made and the annual election of officers held on Wednesday at the final meeting of the Perry Women's Club in Perry High School.

At the conclusion of the business meeting there's to be a social hour in charge of Mrs. Andrew Jones. A trio consisting of Mrs. Ellsworth Parker, Mrs. H. W. Stuchell and Mrs. Lillian Moyer will sing, accompanied by Miss Edna Sharpe.

Mrs. H. S. Fouse President of Council

The nominating committee's ticket has been elected by the National Better Magazines Council as follows: President, Mrs. Harvey S. Fouse; first vice president, Miss Rose Russell; second vice president, Mrs. W. S. Maulsby; recording secretary, Mrs. Thomas S. Loring; corresponding secretary, Miss Jane M. Kerr; treasurer, Mrs. Harry Smith.

Mrs. Charles Morgan has been made chairman of a committee to revise the survey sheet; Mrs. W. A. Wolk, chairman of the clipping committee; Mrs. L. J. Feinaugle, survey chairman, with Mrs. Walter Brown and Miss R. A. Good; Mrs. Paul A. Voight, chairman of the reading committee; Mrs. W. M. Council, membership chairman.

Hadassah to Hold Board Meeting

At 1:30 on Monday in the Y. M. and W. H. A., the season's final board meeting will be held by the Pittsburgh Chapter of Senior Hadassah, both new and retiring board members attending. Plans for the next season will be discussed and chairmen appointed.

Camp Event Will Begin Monday

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

More than 350 children have registered for Mt. Lebanon's summer day camp, which was inaugurated by the Mt. Lebanon Woman's Club and which will open Monday at 10 o'clock in the Washington School. For the next six weeks these youngsters, all between the ages of 8 and 15 years, will find a daily program of recreational activities directed by the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A.

The activities will include athletic and aquatic sports, dramatics, a toy symphony, camp and handcrafts, metal craft and archery and weekly hikes to nearby points of historical interest. The high school shops will be used for the boys' craft work, which is to be supervised by a school shop instructor. Both the high school and the Washington School athletic fields will be utilized for the outdoor routine and the Mt. Lebanon Park and the swimming pool will be available two mornings each week.

Rainy days have, of course, been provided for by indoor programs which include music, games and plays in the gymnasiums. The entire project is now under the direction of the Summer Recreational Association, which is headed by the club's retiring president, Mrs. Harold T. Hanson.

Irma C. McDonald Married Today At Noon

At high-noon today, Miss Irma Carlyn McDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George N. McDonald, of Squirrel Hill avenue, became the bride of Wilbert Roy Harding, son of Mrs. Anna K. Harding, of Shady avenue. The ceremony was performed in the Shadyside Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr.

The bride, attended only by her sister, Miss Dorothy McDonald, wore a gown of white embroidered marquisette, made with a cape collar and a pastel blue satin bow on the bodice, and a large white straw hat with a flower matching the blue of the gown's bow.

Wearing shell pink organza with straw hat to match, the maid of honor carried a Dresden bouquet. Mrs. McDonald, the bride's mother, wore a dark blue sheer and Mrs. Harding white crepe, both with corsages of gardenias.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Harding left on an eastern motor trip and will be at home after August 1 in the King Edward Apartments.

Credit Women To Meet on Tuesday

The June meeting of the Pittsburgh Credit Women's club is set for Tuesday evening at the College Club, North Craig street.

Following dinner the nominating committee will present its candidates for president, vice president and treasurer and these officers will be voted upon.

At 8 o'clock the club will tour the Cathedral of Learning, being conducted through by Richard Connelly.

Maria Knepper Marries Henry K. Bardsley

A bride of Wednesday evening was Miss Maria Knepper, daughter of Mrs. Margaret W. Knepper, when she married Henry K. Bardsley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bardsley, of Roslyn, Montgomery County, in the Oakdale First Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. Dr. Carl White, pastor, assisted the Rev. Dr. W. D. Lewis, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Wheeling, to solemnize the marriage at 6:30 o'clock.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Ronald C. Knepper, of State College, and wore white crepe with a tulle veil and carried white roses showered with lilies of the valley. Miss Margaret Esther Knepper, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore blue organdie. The bridesmaids were Miss Irene Bednar, Mrs. Ray Graham, Miss Elizabeth Shaffer, Miss Ruth Harmon, Miss Helen Wallace and Miss Helen Harney. They wore organdie frocks in peach, yellow and green and carried spring flowers.

Herbert Tyler, of Montrose, was best man and ushers were Frederick Wright, Frederick Harvey, John Davison, George Rutledge, Robert Wallace and James W. Knepper.

There was a reception in the bride's home after which Mr. and Mrs. Bardsley left for the East. They will make their home in Roslyn.

The bride is a graduate of Pennsylvania State College and Margaret Morrison Carnegie College and the bridegroom was graduated from Penn tSate.

Shirley Braunstein Engaged to Marry

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. E. Louis Braunstein, of Bryant street, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Shirley J. Braunstein, to David L. Lando, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lando, of Shady avenue.

Carnegie Girl Engaged to Wed

Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Burdis, of Carnegie, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Burdis, to Frances T. Hennemuth, son of Mrs. Peter Hennemuth, of Oakdale.

Bridal Party Is Selected By Mary Hamilton

Miss Mary Hamilton, who will wed Charles Kermit Ewing, of Coraopolis, in her home in Wilkinsburg the evening of June 25, has chosen her bridal party. She is the daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Hamilton, prominent Pennsylvania educators.

Miss Miriam Young will be the maid of honor, and Marvin Potts, of New Martinsville, W. Va., and Canton, O., is to be best man. The wedding will take place in Miss Hamilton's home in Wilkinsburg.

Miss Betty Lou Johnston, of McKeesport, entertained in her summer home with a bridge party for the bride-elect, and Miss Young will give a lawn party in her honor Saturday, June 23, at her home in Wilkinsburg.

'GIRL IN THE FAMILY' :-: Torn Between Loyalty and Love, Which Does Susan Choose? :-: By Beatrice Burton

Fiance Tells Susan She Is 'Cold Little Woman' As He Goes on Trip

CHAPTER XII.

The family were all together in the parlor that night waiting for Anna to ring the bell for dinner. When Susan came downstairs from her room, where she had been pretending to read while she listened for the sound of Mr. Sholes' motor opening, Lutie had the telephone book on her lap, her dimrk bobbed head bent over it, her pearl earrings gleaming in the firelight.

"I wonder what family of Sholes he does belong to," she was saying. "The only ones I can find in the telephone book live out in Bellmore Park. He'd hardly be one of those Sholeses."

Bellmore Park was the city's wealthiest suburb. Wallace's family lived there in a brick Georgian Colonial house that Susan admired whenever she and Lutie went there to leave their visiting cards.

"There was a woman named Sholes who had a dressmaking shop three or four blocks down the street a long time ago. It must be ten or twelve years ago," remarked Aunt Edna.

"Well, this Sholes upstairs is certainly handsome enough," said Lutie. "And he's not a bit of bother in the house. You can't say that he doesn't mind his own business."

Uncle Worthy stroked his chin judicially. "Well, now, Lutie, isn't it a bit too soon to make up your mind about him? Remember he's only been here three or four days. Later on he may try to be a bit more—well, what shall I say—'friendly'?"

John Angry

John had been sitting all this time in the shabby Turkish leather rocker that was his favorite seat in the house. He was half-hidden behind a newspaper. He put it down now and leaned forward.

"Well, for the love of Mike, why shouldn't he be friendly with us? I rode downtown on the street car with him this morning. And he's a swell guy!" John crumpled the paper nervously in his hand. "I wish some of you'd tell me, anyhow, who we are that a man can't talk to us, if he wants to. All I can see is that we're a shiftless lot of people living on money that Grandfather was smart enough to make for us. We can't even hang on to that. Then why in—"

"That's enough, John!" His father broke in. "Enough of talk like that. You're feeling your oats because you've just begun making thirty dollars a week writing up prize fights for a three-cent news sheet."

"Well, at least I'm working," John said. "Not just holding down a swivel chair all day."

Uncle Worthy turned on John. "I suppose you mean to imply that's what I'm doing all day. Your father's right. You're getting a great deal too big for your boots, young fellow!"

John rose from his chair. His face was white. His eyes were like steel pin points. Susan had seen him angry before, but never full of defiance as he was tonight.

"All my life," he said, "I've been hearing what a wonderful family this is. And how common the Cullens are." Susan wondered why in the world the Cullens were being dragged into this Broderick quarrel. "Just as if they weren't my mother's people. And my people. And Susan's people. There's nothing wrong with them. But even dad hasn't been in their house for years. And you all seem to think that just because Connie Sayre lives with them—"

Difference in Families

Uncle Worthy held up his hand. "One moment, John! The Cullens are decent, hard-working people. There is nothing at all against them. In fact, we are very fond of your mother. But, after all, there is a difference! The Brodericks have been leaders in this city since its founding. We are somebody, whether you think so or not!" He nodded in Susan's direction. "People like the Steffens," he proclaimed, "do not allow their only son to marry just anybody! We may have lost a good deal of our money. But I assure you that the name of Broderick still stands for something in this community."

"Yes? You think so!" John took a step toward Susan. He spoke directly to her.

"Susan," he said, "I wanted Aunt Edna to ask Connie Sayre here for Christmas dinner. You know how many times I've gone down to Leesburg with her to visit her people. I thought it would be decent to have her with us for a change. But Aunt Edna doesn't want her."

So that was at the bottom of this quarrel! Susan understood now.

Aunt Edna raised her head. "I didn't say I didn't want her! I merely pointed out to you that I did not think she would be very happy spending Christmas Day with a houseful of people she had never met before."

John was still looking at Susan. "Well, I won't be home for Christmas dinner. They can count me out. I won't be here tonight for dinner, either. Get your coat on, Susan. I'll take you to the Cullens'. They're always ready for company."

He bolted out of the door, and Susan followed him. She wanted to go with John, even if it meant defying the family. Connie Sayre was a friend of hers, too. And there would be brightness and gayety at the Cullens'!

Knocs Penalty

But she would have to pay for it tomorrow. She knew that.

She was still standing in front of the long mirror in the hall, twisting her little sealskin cap uncertainly in her hands, when John came running down the stairs. Allen Sholes was not far behind him.

"Ready, Susan?" John asked.

"Oh, John!" she said. "I do so want to go with you. But you know how hurt they will be if I do—with dinner all ready and everything. I really think I'd better stay here."

Allen Sholes had stopped just behind John, waiting to pass. She could feel his eyes upon her. "You—you're in Mr. Sholes' way, John," she said.

John wheeled suddenly. "Going out for something to eat, Sholes?" he asked. "Come along with me. I'll take you to a place where there's real food. And real people!"

They went down the hall together, Susan knew John would take him to the Cullens'. Would introduce him to Mary Cullen. And to Sarah.

"I'll go," she said aloud.

Just then Lutie opened the parlor door and came into the hall. She looked relieved when she saw Susan. "Oh, so you didn't go after all! I—I'm glad, Susan. Of course, you remembered that Wallace is coming tonight."

Susan had forgotten all about it.

That night when Wallace arrived he was carrying a very handsome pigskin bag which he set down in the vestibule.

Going Away

"I'm going down to Hot Springs tonight with my dad and mother," he told Susan, getting out of his overcoat and patting his ears which were always pale and became dead white when they were cold. "He's had a cold for a couple of days and the doctor wants him to get away from the office for a while. The train leaves at nine, so I won't have more than a few minutes with you, sweetheart."

In the little reception room, swept and garnished for his entertainment, he put his arms around her and kissed her.

"I am going to miss you a lot," he said. "I'm going to miss"—he kissed her again—"this."

"Kiss me, Susan," he whispered urgently, and with an effort she kissed him on his mouth.

"That isn't a kiss." He laughed as she got up from his knees and sat down beside him. "Cold little woman, you don't know anything about love making do you?"

"I haven't done very much of it," she defended herself.

"I brought your Christmas present along, but you mustn't open it until Christmas morning. I'll call you up Christmas night and find out how you liked it—Next year we'll be together, won't we, in our own house?"

"Any house but the Country Club house," said Susan.

Wallace Leaves

"You think about the house while I'm gone," Wallace said now, his eye on the clock. "We'll never find such a bargain again, and all I'm afraid of is that it may be snapped up before we take it. One of the other fellows at the bank has his eye on it."

He rose, a handsome and impressive figure in his well pressed clothes. "Soft-hearted little goof," he murmured, his hand under her chin. "I'm going now, or I'll miss my train."

When he was gone Susan stood for a moment in the vestibule wondering if she really were emotionally colder than most women. She loved Wallace, but she certainly did not thrill to his love making at all.

And she undoubtedly showed that she did. That was what he meant when he said she was cold. Well she must show her affection to him from now on by becoming a bit more demonstrative.

Their married life in the Country Club house. She simply would not live in that house. When Wallace came back from Hot Springs she would tell him that she did not want to be bothered with the care of a house for the first year or two of their married life, and suggest that they set up housekeeping in a convenient little apartment somewhere. She would point out the economy of living where there would be no coal bill in the winter, no yard man to pay in the summer.

That was the way to manage things, she decided.

Synopsis

Lovely Susan Broderick lives in the old family mansion with her father, Morris, brother John, Uncle Worthy, his wife, Edna, and a spinster aunt, Lutie. Although they have lost their wealth the old folks live in a dream world of social prominence. They feel humiliated when it is necessary to take in a "paying guest." The family wonders what Susan's fiancee, Wallace Steffen, young banker, will think. John does not like Wallace. While Susan is waiting for Wallace, Mr. Sholes, the roomer, arrives. Uncle Worthy reprimands her for talking with Sholes. Wallace presents Susan with a diamond and sapphire ring. Later, Susan comes upon the jeweler's box, stamped with the name of a firm long out of business. The Brodericks objected to Suan and John being friendly with their late mother's relatives, the Cullens. Susan tells Cousin Mary about Sholes.

Now Go On

MEETING THE COOL OF THE EVENING

By PRUNELLA WOOD

BRIDGE-PLAYING addicts frequently take enough time off to get themselves some swell clothes, treasonable as it may sound. There are long, summer nights just ahead when a plate of victuals can be hurriedly swallowed during the extra hour of useless daylight many has given us, and the rest of the night devoted to barter and bicker over grand slams, if any.

So dinner clothes that can take it by daylight or dark are a social weapon along with a working knowledge of negative doubles: three excellent choices are sketched below. There isn't a sweeping sleeve in the lot. Not one of them is too dressy to park in a one-room flat, or too stupid to appear in a swank club room. A fetching cartwheel or tricorn will ensemble elegantly with any of them, dismissing the need of a taxi after the bout if all thirge guests go to the cleaner during it.

Cotton nets in dark shades, taffeta suits with dressy lingerie blouses, those handy frocks made of real Irish crochet, and frail lacy models of the sunprisy sort all make useful frocks for this spirit of play.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS -:- By PAUL MALLON

NRA Payroll Now 3,000; Has Own Postoffice

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Personal relations between the White House and a number of Democratic Congressmen are in need of mending.

No one says much about it, but it explains a lot of the inside troubles the administration has been having with its legislative program during the closing days.

There was something of that element in the difficulties experienced with Chairman Smith, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, and Chairman Steagall, of the House Banking Committee, over the Tugwell nomination and the housing bill.

Ordinarily, the chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee is a fairly big shot as regards agricultural policies. That has not been so since Smith became chairman. The original AAA bills were introduced and championed by Floor Leader Robinson and others last year.

Then, in this session, along came the cotton bill. If there is one thing Senator Smith is more interested in than patronage, it is cotton. His nickname is "Cotton Ed." But, when the latest AAA cotton bill was proposed, it was not Smith, but Senator Bankhead who undertook the leadership for the administration.

Mr. Steagall has had almost the same experience as chairman of the House banking committee. Speaker Rainey went out of his way to keep several administration bills from falling into Mr. Steagall's hands

OIL

An equally good friend of the President is Chairman Rayburn, of the House interstate commerce committee. He fought and bled for all the administration bills entrusted to him, until the oil bill came along.

Mr. Rayburn is from East Texas and the oil men around that area are possibly less favorable to the oil code than in any other section. After all, Mr. Rayburn is representing his district in Congress and not the President. So he sat down upon the oil bill, saying that, if the President asked him as a matter of friendship to report the measure, he would try to do so, but not otherwise.

Mr. Roosevelt heard about that and called Mr. Rayburn on the telephone.

There was nothing for Mr. Rayburn to do but to be a good soldier. He submitted the oil bill to his committee and voted with the President. He was defeated, 12 to 5, and the oil bill was dead.

The explanation is that the other committee members talked with certain Democratic Senators and were told that the bill would never be passed in the Senate. They felt that they might as well kill it.

The upshot is the same. Mr. Roosevelt did not have enough good soldiers to save the bill.

MORAL

The moral of this situation is that bread cast upon political waters returns more swiftly than upon ordinary seas. The secret of good politics is to have all friends and no enemies.

A snubbed oil politician never forgets.

SENATOR ELLISON DURANT SMITH LET THE WORLD KNOW THAT WHAT HE WANTED IN THE WAY OF AN UNDER-SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WAS A DIRT FARMER.

AND, IN A FEW WELL CHOSEN WORDS—HE CHOSE SOME 11,271 WORDS FOR HIS PURPOSE—HE MADE IT CLEAR THAT HE DIDN'T WANT A MR. TUGWELL—DR. TUGWELL—THE REVEREND DR. TUGWELL—PROFESSOR TUGWELL OR EVEN "BROTHER TUGWELL" FOR THE JOB.

TO HIS CREDIT LET IT BE SAID THAT SENATOR SMITH WENT DOWN FIGHTING, AND WITH TWO NICE, JUICY SLICES OF SOUTH CAROLINA PATRONAGE FOR HIS PAINS.

AND, HE DID MAKE IT CLEAR THAT WHAT HE REALLY WANTED WAS A DIRT FARMER.

Notes of a New Yorker in California

LOS ANGELES:

I have been rebuked and scolded by Uncle Sam . . . That is, the Department of Interior's Bureau of Information (obviously very sensitive about criticism) takes exception to the scallions tossed at that branch of the government—for annulling the marriage of the Jackson Barnetts . . . Barnett was the rich old Indian, who recently died at the age of 90 or so . . . The wrist spanking said in part that the Dep't of Interior didn't annual the marriage—that the Federal Courts did it . . . I know, but the Dep't of Interior was the prosecutor—which is the same thing . . . I am not interested in the allegations that Mrs. Barnett "forced" the old Injun into the marriage when he was allegedly incompetent . . . All I know is that any woman who lives for 14 years with an Indian or a columnist—is getting a rough deal when she winds up on the short end . . . She merely cleaned him up and almost made him a gentleman . . . Now Uncle Sam says she rates nothing . . . Will Rogers and Arthur Brisbane think otherwise, and so do I . . . The letter, dipped in sarcasm, referred to Barnett as "that poor old Indian" . . . Poor? . . . With four million smackers?

In response to the query here the other day: "Who was the director who peeled off three tens from a bankroll?" (to pay for a stranger's life to be saved) comes this telegram: "The man was not a director, but an actor. It happened in the Beverly Hills Receiving Hospital. His name was Ted Healy, and I am the man he saved — Gerald Thurlow."

From my chum, James Cannon, comes a personal report of the funeral of a mutual pal—Billy La Hiff . . . "He was a great man, Walter," says Jim, "because he did great things . . . Billy was a foe of pain and poverty, a laughing apostle of friendship in a community where a man's best friend and severest critic is his bank balance.

"He loved life and showed it by the way he helped people live. The only time he clenched his fist was to conceal the money he slipped to guys whose luck ran out . . . In the dark cathedrals of the mind, candles will burn piously for Billy a long time.

"Billy was the Bishop of Broadway . . . The 'Tavern' was his tabernacle . . To it came all the lonesome wanderers of the world, when they lost their chips in the roulette of life . . . The tarnished, the slightly soiled, and the forgotten were his pals . . . Around him gathered fortune's outcasts—refugees fleeing from their evil destiny into warmth of his thin, oddly sad smile . . . Every night he dined with the lads who couldn't beat the dice. He adopted those fate disinherited.

"It should be easy for Billy to climb those golden stairs. This is the first time he carries nobody's burdens . . . Damon Runyon best described him as 'The Man Who Couldn't Say No.'

"It is an old Broadway saying that if you were broke the place to eat was at his rendezvous . . . You and I know, Walter, that anybody could cast a show, run a newspaper with big name features, and light up another Broadway with the names on his bale of bum checks and tabs.

"They ought to be La Hiff's rain checks to Heaven."

What the baby said usually bores me, unless it is what mine says . . . But this is an amusing crack by a tot . . . She is Mary Lou Fitts, the daughter of the Los Angeles District Attorney . . . When Mary Lou was five years old her daddy was running for the Lieut. Governorship of California . . . The tiny lass made speeches to the neighborhood kids . . . "And lemme tell you this, too!" Mary Lou concluded at the top of her lungs, "if you vote for my daddy—he will not only put out Al Capony—but all the other little ponies!" . . . Fitts was elected.

The wildest things happen to me. . . . A youngster of Palm Springs, Cal., which isn't far from L. A., had himself an idea. . . . He would get me in his power, it appears. . . . Thus he could dictate what would appear in my columns. . . . His plot (the police just informed me) was inspired because he felt that the Hollywood impresarios were ruining the mystery fables of S. S. Van Dine—by poor casting. . . . His ambition was to become the casting director of them, and save Van Dine's works from ruination, etc. . . . But how to get such a good job? . . . Ah, yes. . . . He would in some way "get Winchell to look over his own writings" and permit me to use them without credit. . . . Then he would threaten me with a suit for plagiarism. . . . And I would shudder at the thought and offer him anything to keep from being disgraced. . . . He would then demand editorship of my column, and he would use that power to frighten all Hollywood and then he would satisfy his ambition. . . . What an idea, huh? . . . They just confined him at Patton, the local bug house.

Davies Film Thrills in Penn

By KARL KRUG

That the espionage systems of both the North and South during the Civil War were far-flung and efficient is thrillingly recounted in "Operator 13," Miss Marion Davies' latest Cosmopolitan starring vehicle, which opened auspiciously yesterday in the Penn.

Offering Miss Davies as a Northern spy, and Gary Cooper as an undercover agent of the Confederacy, "Operator 13" combines tender romance with grim, sturdy-paced melodrama, the net result being one of the finest photoplays with an historical background yet to reach the talking screen.

Laid in that period of crinoline and old lace about which the late Robert W. Chambers wrote so entrancingly, the makers of "Operator 13" have clung faithfully to the original story, Harvey Thew, Zelda Sears and Eva Green having made a screen adaptation that maintains interest and suspense from beginning to end.

While both Miss Davies and Mr. Cooper have been happily cast in the roles of Gale Loveless and Captain Gailliard, and have been given a more than an efficient coterie of supporting players, too much credit cannot be given to Richard Boleslavsky, famed Russian director, formerly in charge of the Moscow Art Theater, and who helped Max Reinhardt in the latter's production of "The Miracle," for his thorough job on "Operator 13."

CAPTURES SOUTHERN CHARM

Not only has Boleslavsky captured the charm of the old South in setting and investiture, but the quaint songs of the Mills Brothers, as members of a traveling medicine show, and the old-fashioned dances on the eve of the Battle of Dreury's Bluff have been handled so adroitly that they blend perfectly with the action of the narrative. Many colorful backgrounds have been reproduced and the numerous sidelights on how the spy systems were operated during the Rebellion add mightily to the entertainment value of the film.

Spies have fallen in love before in both stage and screen fiction, but Miss Davies and Mr. Cooper make their romance a thing of life in this talkie. There is no maudlin sentiment thrown in the way of war-time accuracy. Seen first as a creole camp follower, a disguise she adopts to enter the Confederate lines, and the character in which she first meets Cooper, Miss Davies later goes South as a rebel girl captured in New York, and it is then that "Operator 13" reaches its peak, both in melodrama and romance.

For a time the havoc wrought to Southern campaign plans by Miss Davies' skill in extracting information from the Virginia family with which she is living almost blocks her love affair, but the climax is worked out with considerable skill and logic. The battle scenes have been photographed and directed in admirable style, Boleslavsky's flair for detail and unusual camera angles having been given full play. Not that the warring sequences have been overdone; there are very few of them, but such as there are are necessary to the development of the story.

FAMOUS CHARACTERS

The cast is studded with characters whose names are famous in Civil War history. Katharine Alexander plays Pauline Cushman, famous federal spy, while Douglas Dumbrille gives an admirable picture of General "Jeb" Stuart, dashing Southern cavalry raider. Brief interludes of comedy are supplied by Ted Healy, working without his stooges, and Jean Parker, gay little Southern belle, whose romance is blasted forever by the accurate information "Operator 13" sends through the lines.

Miss Davies' amazing versatility was never more in evidence than in the latest incumbent of the Penn screen. She contributes a dramatic performance of power and appeal, is winsome, lovely and believeable, and, what is more, makes no attempt to claim the spotlight entirely for her benefit. Every important member of the cast is given plenty of footage. Cooper, given one of those "strong, silent" parts he handles so well, makes the most of it.

The genius of Walt Disney once more comes to light in the latest Mickey Mouse funfest, "Camping Out," also on the Penn bill along with a Thelma Todd-Patsy Kelly short comedy that manages to extract a laugh now and then.

West Point On Screen

Graduation day at West Point, with 250 cadets receiving their commissions and making merry, is pictured in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News with a description by The Globe Trotter, Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, hands each the diploma that makes him a second lieutenant in Uncle Sam's army.

England's most brilliant military pageant is seen in London on the occasion of the celebration of King George's sixty-ninth birthday. Riding his charger, the monarch takes the salute from the guards at the trooping of the colors.

A full dress review brings commencement week to a climax at the Pennsylvania Military College, in Chester, Pa. Secretary of the Interior Ickes is given the degree of doctor of laws.

Note—Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange programs in time schedules it is possible some subjects of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.

Fight Pictures For Fulton

Motion pictures of the Max Baer-Primo Carnera heavyweight championship prize fight, the complete battle by rounds, will be shown in the Fulton Theater, beginning Monday. The camera account of the fight in which Max Baer brought the heavyweight title back to the United States, will be shown as an added feature with "Change of Heart," the Janet Gaynor-Charles Farrell starring vehicle, which will be held for an additional three days, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, in the Fulton. Next Thursday will bring the new Warner Baxter photoplay, "Such Women Are Dangerous," to the Sixth street movie house.

High Water Slide At Kennywood

A new water slide, 20 feet high, has been installed in the swimming pool at Kennywood Park. The pool and amusements are attractions every day and night, Sundays included. Tonight Jess Hawkins and his Virginians play the Saturday specialty dance. They will be heard in two free concerts tomorrow. Other free entertainment for Sunday will include the Eugene Troupe, performers on the horizontal bars, and Billy Lorette, clown policeman.

Helen Wayne Cast In Lead Role

Helen Wayne and Robert Gill will play the leading roles in "The Curtain Rises," by B. M. Kaye, which will open for a week Monday, June 25, as the first production of the Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse 1934 summer season in the Arnold School Auditorium. Miss Wayne has played leading roles in many past productions in the Playhouse. Miss Wayne and Mr. Gill have played opposite each other several times. They had much success in "Goodbye Again" last summer.

Capital Goes Hollywood For 'Operator 13'

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The nation's capital vied with filmdom's capital last night and went Hollywood in a big way with klieg lights, microphones and flashlights at the premiere of "Operator 13," starring Marion Davies and Gary Cooper.

Hundreds of spectators came to watch the distinguished, gaily dressed crowds of official and social Washingtonians attending the premiere. Sidewalk crowds cheered as names of the capital's celebrities were announced over the microphone, just as the names of film celebrities are announced at Hollywood's premieres.

Among the 300 guests invited for the first viewing of the thrilling Civil War spy picture were his highness Prince Eugene de Ligne, Secretary and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Ambassador and Mme. Paul May, of Belgium; Ambassador and Mme. Johnkheer H. M. van Haersma de With, of the Netherlands; Mr. and Mrs. Marvin McIntyre, of the White House staff; Senate Secretary and Mrs. Edwin A. Halsey.

Senator and Mrs. Pat Harrison, Commissioner and Mrs. George Allen, Senator John Bankhead, Senator James Byrnes, District of Columbia Commissioner George Allen, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Turner Battle, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

Senator Tom Connally, Representative and Mrs. Robert Ramspeck, Horace Luttrell, Col. and Mrs. Robert Davis, Judge Sykes, of the Federal Radio Commission; J. Austin Latimer, Representative and Mrs. A. J. Montague, Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Lawrence W. Robert, Jr., Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Representative and Mrs. Carl Vinson, Representative and Mrs. Sam D. McCreynolds, Representative and Mrs. Frank Gillespie.

Ninety-three-year-old Edgar Warfield, Civil War veteran, of Alexandria, Va., sat among the diplomats and officials and thrilled to the scenes with which he is so familiar.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Gloria Smith Sues for Heart Balm

GLORIA SMITH, a cloak and suit model, recently brought suit against an elderly millionaire. She claimed that the gentleman agreed to marry her, and then broke his promise and her heart at the same time. May I present you with a few reactions? . . .

* * *

HER EMPLOYER: Just wait until she shows up. I'll fire her, that's what I'll do! I won't have her working here another minute. Not with a high-class concern like mine.

A fine state of affairs, that's what it is. Look at this. She's on the front page of every newspaper in the city. And plenty of pictures, no less. That's a fine thing, isn't it? The girl ought to be ashamed of herself.

All this publicity—and not once does she mention the firm! . . .

* * *

TEN MEN: Is this a laugh? Ho, ho, ho! Imagine that dame talking about a broken heart. How could he break something she never had?

That poor old bozo certainly must be dumb. She says she's got letters he wrote to her. If that's true, he hasn't got a chance. Ho, ho, ho. What a sap!

Hey, that reminds me. I wonder if she burnt those letters I sent her that time? Say, just—a—minute . . .

* * *

GLORIA'S BOY FRIEND: A swell gell! Yes, sir, a swell gal—I don't think! Me wasting a whole year almost, hanging around this dame, and what does she do to me? She has this rich bloke on the string all the time and I never catchw ise!

Well' I'm through with her. Absolutely and positively finished. If she'd only of let me in on it, I could've handled thing for her right. Yeah, we woulda been able to clip the sucker for a hundred grand easy, instead of a measly fifty. A dope, that 's what she is.

But, when you stop to think of it, fifty grand is always fifty grand. Maybe I will give her a ring later at that . . .

* * *

THE VICTIM'S LAWYER: Of all the chiselling gold diggers! That's exactly what she is—an unscrupulous gold digger. My poor client is nothing but a trusting old soul. He was easy prey for a woman of her type.

How can women do such things? What can this girl be thinking of? It's easy to see that she hasn't a scrap of conscience. Well, I'm going to do all I can for the poor old soul. She isn't going to get money from him if I can help it. Why she ought to be ashamed of herself for even asking for any!

He'll be in this afternoon and I'll have to ask him for a small retainer. Five thousand dollars would be about right, I think. After all, the old dope has plenty of money . . .

* * *

A REPORTER: Well, boss, as I see it, the whole case is a cinch. The dame's a blackmailer, the old guy is nuts and both lawyers are a couple of crooks. And if that doesn't belong on Page One, what does? . . .

* * *

AN ELEVATOR OPERATOR: You're Miss Smith's lawyer and you want me to testify for her? No, sir. Not me. I'm not that kind of man. I—wha'zat? Why, thank you, sir. Yes, sir. For 20 bucks I can remember plenty.

Do I remember him? You bet I do. Didn't I take him up to her apartment all those times? Didn't I have to laugh to myself plenty of times when I watched 'em giving out the old love stuff?

Like that night they were in the car and talking baby talk. Yeah, on the level. He's kinda tall, see, and not a bad-looking egg. She has to reach up to pat his face, and she's calling him "Honey Lamb" and sometimes "Frankie." She—

Wha'zat you said? That ain't the right guy? . . .

* * *

THE VICTIM: Fifty thousand dollars! Whew! She'll never get it, I tell you. Never! I'll fight this thing with every cent I own. Because it isn't the money I care about; it's the principle of the thing.

Fifty thousand! And what for? Just because she feels she's in a position to blackmail me. No, sir, she won't get a cent. It's ridiculous. Fifty thousand, just because I wouldn't marry her.

Marry her! How I hate the sound of those words. Sometimes I think I should settle with her and let it go at that. Maybe, in the long run, I'd be getting the best of the bargain. Lord, suppose I had maried her! . . .

* * *

GLORIA SMITH: I guess this'll show him. It ain't the money, you understand; it's the principle of the thing.

It's just like I told them newspaper guys. He took advantage of my youth and trusting nature. I guess this'll teach that old coot not to trifle with a young girl's affections. When a dame is young and innocent, like me, them rich guys think they can get away with murder.

Hey, Johnny, bring me another double rye. And see if you can get Max Baer on the telephone . . .

Comedy, Mystery In Regent

"The Party's Over" and "The Affairs of a Gentleman," the latter having Paul Lukas and Leila Hyams in the leading roles, comprise the double bill being presented in the Regent. Stuart Erwin and Ann Sothern are featured in "The Party's Over," a comedy transferred to the screen from the Broadway stage. In it Erwin plugs along as a family sacrificial ox until Miss Sothern makes him see that he ought to do something for himself, too. So he tells idle relatives they'll have to go to work, themselves, parties at his expense being over. The cast includes Arline Judge, Chick Chandler and Patsy Kelly. "The Affairs of a Gentleman" are centered in the mystery of who killed a man who has affairs with many women.

Little Jack Little For Greensburg

Little Jack Little and his Columbia orchestra are coming to the New Coliseum ballroom, Greensburg, Tuesday night, June 19, to entertain and play for dancing. New Coliseum dances are held each Saturday night from 8:30 to 12 o'clock, eastern standard time. Tonight Ray Pearl and his broadcasting orchestra will play.

'Little Man, What Now?' In Stanley

By MICHAEL SHAW

A first-rate screen play made from Hans Fallada's successful novel of post-war Germany, "Little Man, What Now?" opened yesterday in the Stanley. It rejoices in the inspired direction of Frank Borzage, and it presents Margaret Sullavan and Douglass Montgomery in some of the most appealing action the films have given us.

"Little Man, What Now?" as the thousands who read the book will remember, is the simple story of a young clerk and his girl who ask very little of life, and yet are denied that little in a stricken world.

They love and they marry, and when they have "peace and tolerance," as the youthful husband phrases it, and a bare living, they are happy beyond measure.

But work is hard to find and harder to keep. The moments of peace and joy are few and brief. Misfortune, worry, wretchedness and hunger fill the lives of these brave youngsters. In a room over a kindly furniture maker's stable, their son and heir is born into a world which apparently has no more use for him than it has for his parents.

So the novel ends, posing the question which provides its title. The movie-makers have tacked on a happy ending. There is great news; a job, a good job, has been found for the hero of Amsterdam.

The movies have not been doing this of late, and it comes as a surprise. Not that it can spoil such a fine picture. As a matter of fact, it is rather welcome, and it gives you a chance to get rid of the lump in your throat before the lights go up.

The economic background, so important in the novel, is lightly but effectively sketched in. The jobless are present, and the Communists and the "marchers." One of the characters is a nudist, and there are hints of the depravity which marked life in certain circles of Berlin after the war.

But the emphasis is on the idyl of young love, cheerful and courageous, surviving the horrors of depression and unrest.

This is what might have been expected of Mr. Borzage, the creator of "Seventh Heaven;" and Mr. Borzage has surpassed himself in his tender treatment of the lovely little romance. There are many memorable touches, including a merry-go-round scene that may be recommended as something very special.

As for Miss Sullavan and Mr. Montgomery, they are hardly short of perfection. The pretty young actress who rose to fame through one picture, "Only Yesterday," repeats her splendid work here. It would be a hard-hearted spectator indeed who did not grieve for her in her troubles and rejoice with her in her small triumphs and gaities.

The greatest tribute that can be paid Mr. Montgomery is to say that he quite matches Miss Sullavan in effectiveness. His work is by far the best he has done in the movies. A large and excellent supporting cast provides picturesque atmosphere.

Here is an intelligent and a moving film drama—an essential for all serious theatergoers.

SHEFFIELD, England, June 16.—Red snakes a quarter of a mile long, diving down a runway at 25 miles an hour show the speed of British recovery in Sheffield. These snakes are flat ones, like hoops.

Next door another red snake darts past the workman at 30 miles an hour. This one is round like a rod. This one goes so fast that if it broke, huge coils of fiery red steel would pile in twisted knots before the machinery could be stopped. So the workmen all wear armor of netting.

The snakes are the band and rod steel coming out of the mills of the United States Companies, Ltd., plant. The mills are running at capacity 24 hours a day, and they are behind in filling orders.

STEEL BOOMING

British steel is not merely recovering. British steel is booming. Steel is the heart of industry. Its age is named after it. Steel is used in every manufacture. When the heart of industry is beating strongly, industry is healthy. British steel works are producing today more steel than ever in their history.

Sheffield stands for steel the world over, and from time immemorial. Chaucer talked of Sheffield knives. In all England the most dignified municipal post next to the lord mayor of London is the master cutler of Sheffield. Biggest steel plant in Sheffield and one of the largest in England is that of the United Steel Companies, Ltd. United Steel is making 1,350,000 tons this year, 450,000 more than last year. They are paying out 50 per cent more in wages this year. They will have a profit of $5,000,000 for the year ending in June, compared to $2,000,000 the previous year. For the first time in years they will pay a dividend, of five per cent.

BETTER THAN AMERICAN

England has been criticized for her backwardness in steel making also. But take a look at this plant. Once more the engineer guide pointed out here an American machine, there an American machine, but this time he pointed to several "better than American." Automatized, down to the last detail this vast plant, a quarter of a mile long, houses machines that do the work of thousands of men. The process starts in the immense shed where 14 eighty-ton open hearth furnaces are blazing incandescent. They are all going full blast. White tongues of flame lick viciously from cracks between the bricks.

Down in the yards mountainous piles of pig iron and countless railroad cars full of scrap iron yield to a giant magnet. It reaches down and lovingly clings to half a ton of scrap. Much of this scrap has come from Germany and America. So fast has British steel production gone ahead that British scrap ran out.

'SUNRISE IN HELL'

The magnet lifts the scrap and, losing interest, drops it in a steel spoon on the platform where the furnaces blaze. Another crane runs a steel handle 12 inches thick into the base of the spoon, lifts it and turns toward the furnaces.

A furnace door opens. Thirty feet away the heat drives one backwards. Into the interior of that blazing fury the crane delicately inserts the spoon, and with a rotary motion deposits another mouthful of scrap. Two men, one at the magnet and one at the spoon, have done the whole job of loading the furnaces.

On the other side of the furnaces a deep canyon stretches away into dim vistas. Presently a ladle holding 100 tons is brought alongside a furnace. The pour begins. They call it "teeming." It looks like sunrise in hell. Boiling steel is probably the most fearsome and beautiful object on earth.

SHEFFIELD SPECIALTY

From the ladle the bubbling white-hot metal is "teemed" into ingots. Here, explained our guide, is a Sheffield specialty. Elsewhere they pour the steel into ingots as one pours water into a glass. Here they pour it in from beneath, believing it makes a more solid sounder ingot.

"Cooled" to a white-yellow, but solid mass, the ingots are stripped of their moulds, lifted by monstrous clutching cranes, and lowered into soaking pits, to be re-heated to a temperature exactly the same in every part of the ingot. Today this plant is turning out 13,000 tons of ingots weekly.

Chariots carry the re-heated ingots to the cogging mill. Few industrial sights are so impressive as a five-ton yellow hot ingot going through the rollers of a cogging mill. Fifteen thousand horses gallop back and forth over the fuming ingot. The fifteen thousand horses are controlled by three men. They stand side by side on a control platform. Each man runs a different part of the machine. They do it with amazing co-ordination. It is as though a racing automobile had three chauffeurs, one at the steering wheel, one at the accelerator and one at the brakes.

FEW WORKMEN

Out of the cogging mill the ingot comes reduced to a long beam of steel six inches thick, still yellow hot. Live rollers deliver it in on continuous operation through the rolling mills which run it down to four inches square.

Our guide remarked:

Belts and rollers throughout the entire quarter mile length of the shop carry the steel this way and that, until in an incredibly short time the finished product, just a while ago pig iron and scrap, is delivered automatically to the railroad cars.

Whither is it bound? It is bound to make homes for housewives, to make girders and beams and cooking ranges, gas and electric cookers, fittings for bath rooms and kitchens. It is bound to make ships and engines and boilers, cabin furnishings and war vessels. It is bound to make tools and knives, and bricklayers trowels, and soldering irons.

HIGH DUTY ON STEEL

It is bound to make railway carriages, axles, wheels and springs. It is bound to make automobiles and airplanes, saw mills, mining tools. It is bound to make needles and razors and bridges.

British steel can make this sort of comeback because in the first place the British government put a 33 1-3 per cent duty on imported steel. Before the tariff Britain imported around 3,000,000 tons of steel yearly. Now, but chiefly because British steel plants cannot keep up with the home consumption, the import is still, but only 1,000,000 tons. The government has just announced that the tariff, due to expire in October, is to be continued indefinitely.

The steel tariff directly increased the demand for British steel. The general tariff of 16 per cent ad valorem imposed in 1932 on virtually all imports, boosted later to an average of at least 30 per cent on most articles, indirectly the demand for British steel by increasing the manufacture in Britain of all the variety of goods requiring steel as a raw material.

GREATEST YEAR!

The upshot has been that in the first four months of this year 3,000,000 tons of steel produced, up 1,000,000 tons over 1933. The production of 1934 is heading to surpass the record of 9,616,000 tons in 1929, greatest steel year Britain ever had.

Unemployment in the steel industry is down 30,000 on a year ago. Additional furnaces are being put in blast each month. British production never as badly off as American, never fell lower than 57 per cent of capacity. It is now above 80 per cent. If all the obsolescent plants which should never be used again were excluded it is estimated that production is up to 90 per cent of capacity. This compares with current American steel production of about 70 per cent of capacity.

Of the recovery in this most essential prime material of industry there can be no doubt in Britain. But what of the uses to which it is put? Will the demand continue? Is the boom durable?

WATERS FIGHTS EXTRA SESSION

HARRISBURG, April 1.—(AP)—Opposing a special session of the Legislature to raise relief funds, Charles A. Waters, State Treasurer, today urged that money be borrowed from the motor license fund to meet the emergency. He said:

"If idle dollars are available and they can be used at tremendous saving to the taxpayers and subsequently repaid, it is unthinkable that a plan cannot be agreed upon to see us out of our difficulties."

Despite denials from Washington, reports persist that the Federal government intends to shut off Pennsylvania's relief funds unless the state shoulders part of the burden.

Gov. Pinchot has declined to say whether he will call a special session in the event that Federal aid stops.

McAdoo Heads List Of Johnson Signers

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—(INS.)—The name of United States Senator William G. McAdoo today headed the list of sponsors for United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson's nominations for re-election on the Democratic ticket.

Johnson thus is expected to be the nominee of the Democratic, Republican and Progressive parties, insuring his re-election in November without opposition.

Picnic Days Are Here Again!

Free! Annual School Picnic OUTINGS

At the Big Amusement Parks

PICNIC days are here! Many of the public schools in the Pittsburgh area have arranged for special picnic days at Kennywood Park, West View Park and Olympia Park, McKeesport. Through a special arrangement made by the Sun-Telegraph with the management of these 3 parks, hundreds of children will be enabled to enjoy a picnic outing at the expense of the Sun-Telegraph. The Sun-Telegraph believes that this plan will enable many children to enjoy their school picnic who might otherwise not be able to attend. Every subscription secured during the campaign now under way will bring happiness to the boy or girl who is asking for your subscription order.

Free Rides—Free Attractions—Free Refreshments

Free Tickets For Kennywood

Free Tickets For West View

Free Tickets For Olympia, McKeesport

Go To Your School Picnic As a Guest of the SUN-TELEGRAPH

This liberal free offer gives every boy and girl—adults, too—an opportunity to enjoy a complete day's outing at any one of the above parks. It gives every school boy and school girl an opportunity to attend his or her annual school picnic and have just as good a time as all others who happen to be in a position to buy their tickets for the rides and attractions and refreshments. All you have to do is get 3 New 26-Weeks Home Delivery orders for the daily Sun-Telegraph and you will be given a strip of 40 tickets—the same as you buy at the schools for $1.00—and on top of that you will be given a strip of ten 5-cent refreshment tickets. This combination will give you a complete day of pleasure.

Start getting your orders for the Sun-Telegraph today so that you will have your tickets in time for your picnic. Call on your neighbors, friends and relatives and ask them to sign the order blanks below. You only need three—and you'll have an exciting day of pleasure.

GET THESE BLANKS SIGNED

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

To assist the boy or girl wearing this order in his effort to earn a day's outing with his classmates (including all amusements and ample refreshments) as a reward for securing 3 home delivery orders, I hereby agree to subscribe to the Daily Sun-Telegraph for a period of twenty-six (26) weeks and thereafter until ordered discontinued by me. I agree to pay the regular home delivery collector on his regular collection day at the rate of eighteen (18c) cents per week. If the Sunday edition is also delivered, I understand it is to cost me twenty-eight (28c) cents per week.

I agree that upon acceptance of this order by the Sun-Telegraph it shall become a valid contract and that I will continue to take the Daily Sun-Telegraph for the full period of twenty-six (26) consecutive weeks.

DO NOT SIGN THIS ORDER IF YOU HAVE BEEN A REGULAR SUN-TELEGRAPH SUBSCRIBER SINCE APRIL 1, 1934.

Selfish Parents Keeping Couple From Altar

This is a pretty how-do-you-do. SELFISH PARENTS, I say. Or maybe even GREEDY.

They don't want to give up the money which is paid in regularly to them by the young folks. Good jobs aren't found walking down the street. Neither is a good son or a good daughter, who dutifully turns in the pay envelope, gathered from bushes.

And when two such young people fall in love, they are told to wait another year . . . Mamma and papa on both sides of the fence, need a little more change . . . The dimes and nickels rattling out of the Saturday night work-remittance is too pleasant a jingle to be allowed to get away from "the old folks at home." Even though it does mean the keeping of the little love god in the background.

Miss Brunot

Apron Strings is worried about all this and writes me:

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a girl who will be 21 in a month's time, and am much in love with a young man four years older. We have been going together steady for three years, and have been engaged for a number of months. He gives all his money to his home people. And I do the same thing. Our families don't want us to marry until the year '35. We see no sense in this waiting.

HAVEN'T MUCH MONEY

We haven't much money now, I'll admit. But with us both giving our wages to our home people, we'll never get any saved anyhow. Don't you think we could get married this year and live in a room for awhile until we saved enough to buy furniture. Then we would be ready for our own house. I love and respect my parents. But that seems to be the trouble on both sides. APRON STRINGS.

Since you have been going together for such a long while and are engaged and ready to marry, I fail to see why you cannot do so . . . It should not be expected, unless your parents are in dire need, that you give up your own life for them. I agree you will never get ahead, if you have to pass all your pay-check over to you parents . . . . . Your stationery and manner of writing do not indicate, in any way, that you are overly poor . . . I imagine you and the boy friend will get the most happiness out of life by being in a home of your own.

ATTITUDE CHANGED

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am 19 years of age and was married, but was divorced two weeks ago . . . I have been going with a fellow eight months. His mother tried to keep us apart, but now she treats me very well, and has invited me up to her place . . . I really love the fellow and he tells me that he loves me.

We have been going places together, and he wouldn't go anywhere without me. But last Saturday night he took me and my sister to a dance. But he didn't want to dance, and left and went to a show. He has been acting queer since I asked him what was wrong. He says, it is nothing. Should I keep going with him? BARBARA.

Perhaps the fellow feels self-conscious going with a young woman who has been divorced from another man for but two weeks. I am sure things will be all right if you exert patience. The fact his mother approves of you helps . . . You should have gone with him to the show when he did not care to dance. Staying with your sister and dancing with other men looked as if you treated his affection lightly.

WANTS BOY BACK

Judith could have had this boy she now loves, but she played around with an old friend, and now that he is toeing it to another girl's Mission Swing she is all het up about it and wants him back.

It isn't puppy love, either, she asserts . . . it's the honest-to-goodness variety . . . she can't eat or sleep, and is altogether miserable. Always running into him, too, at every corner. And often when she's with other fellows. No wonder she's unhappy. For all the while she wants him back, and yet every turn of the tide is against her.

He goes with one girl a good deal. But I know it is not a steady affair. I am desperate, and even my parents are beginning to worry about me. If I get but a glimpse of him my whole evening is spoiled. He is very friendly towards me. But never asks to come to see me. And he has told me many a time he thinks it awful for a girl to ask a fellow for a date.

So runs Judith's complaint.

TRY FOR DATE

And, sister, it is just too bad you did not let well enough alone. There, this fellow was coming to see you and everything was going smoothly, when you let the old friend cut in on him . . . You didn't care for the old friend, so why did you do it? To let your boy friend see your popularity, perhaps. Or maybe because you didn't THINK.

But, remember what a man says and what he does do not always tally. So, if you were to ask him for a DATE, you might be surprised how alertly he would accept . . . Try it, anyway . . .

Such unhappiness as you are experiencing is very difficult to bear . . . You will learn your lesson, Judith, and won't be so indifferent to the future dates you have with the man you really care for you. You see, it doesn't get a girl very far to play a part she does not feel.

The old adage, actions speak louder than words, is a doctrine with most fellows, especially when they are courting . . . And when you maneuver about, the man is likely to go elsewhere, as your friend did.

Miss Brunot will be glad to answer letters submitted to her by readers.

HER VISIT ENDED, SHE FLIES BACK WITH THE FIRST LADY.

Miss America—or, no, the Misses America, now set down their last thrill in their "Picture Book of Washington." Some day they will go back again, of course.

Sylvia, happily, lives there. But to Sue and Sally, Washington, even as a beautiful city, was new. So to Sue and Sally the halls of fame of their county are never to be forgotten. To have tea with a President's wife! To hear her talk to the newspaper women! To be kindly escorted through the White House!

"My Country 'Tis of Thee!" breathed Sally and Sue with feeling and fervor, when at last the day came to pack for home—which is Old New York.

"Bright child! Let's!" cheered Sue.

Duty did not call Sylvia just yet; and so she invited herself to go along.

One more picture to add to their thrill collection! For who should be taking their plane, too, but the First Lady herself!

She remembered Sally and Sue, invited them to sit near her with Sylvia, to whom she had extended many courtesies, and asked them questions about their girlish affairs. She wore a blue silk suit, and Sue and Sally thought that it was a surprisingly close match to the really lovely blue of her eyes.

And while she talked and listened, she knitted.

Sue and Sally said goodby on the ground, with breathless thanks, and the First Lady shook hands, with a look af amusement and kindness for their youth. And they cross the Hudson, her fans for life.

"Wasn't it lovely?" sighed Sue.

"Which," asked Sally, "Washington, flying, or Mrs. Roosevelt?"

"All three," pronounced Sue.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

THE END.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

For many years little was known about the spleen and the nature of its disorders. It was looked upon as a vital organ and generally believed that the human body could not function without it.

Dr. Copeland

We have found out that the spleen is closely associated with the manufacture of red blood cells and the coloring matter of the blood. Its action is related to digestion. But it is now known that life can continue without this structure.

Some surgeons advise the removal of the spleen in certain blood disorders. For example, this operation may be called for in a disease known as "purpura hemorrhagica." In this affliction the victim suffers from severe and sudden hemorrhages. These follow a very slight fall or blow, and yet may be so severe as to prove fatal.

Removal of the spleen is of great benefit to many a sufferer from purpura hemorrhagica. Afterward there are no longer severe and unexpected attacks of bleeding and the patient is able to lead a useful and happy life. Unfortunately, not all cases of purpura hemorrhagica are entirely cured by "splenectomy," which is the name given the operation.

"Gaucher's disease" is another affliction benefited by the removal of the spleen. This is an anemic disturbance characterized by a yellowish discoloration of the skin and eyeballs. As a rule, the spleen and liver are enlarged and the victim suffers from severe bleeding from the gums, lungs and intestinal tract.

It is believed to be a hereditary disease, repeatedly occuring in certain families. This slow and insidious disease is more common among men than women. It generally begins in childhood, but attracts no attention until the victim is between 25 and 40 years of age.

It is only when splenectomy is performed that any relief or cure can be offered in this disease. With the removal of the spleen the anemia disappears and the patient improves. Though the disease is a rare one, we are indebted to those scientists who made available this method of cure.

"Banti's disease, or splenic anemia, is another ailment of the spleen that is curable by removal of the spleen. This disease is characterized by an unusual enlargement of the spleen. Ordinarily it is met in childhood, but may be found in adults.

Children afflicted with this disease are subject to repeated nose bleeds. They complain of poor appetite, constipation and other digestive disturbances. Upon examination, the spleen is found to be enlarged and sometimes the liver is also enlarged.

When recognized in its early stages, cure can be obtained by removal of the spleen. In more advanced cases, where the liver is involved and other changes have taken place, the operation may not be beneficial. The physician who has followed the case and is familiar with the physical condition of the patient will be able to determine the advisability of operation.

Answers to Health Queries

H. M. Q.—What foods and what particular form of exercise will help a sluggish liver?

A.—Simple foods and a normal amount of walking or any other outdoor exercise should be of general benefit and advantage. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Contract Bridge :: HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

By No Means a Pianola

Bridge players have borrowed from the musical manufacturing trade a term to describe a hand which plays itself. Inasmuch as the pianola grinds out its music practically without the aid of human hands or human intelligence, so Bridge players speak of a hand which plays itself as a "pianola." As a matter of fact, there are few such hands, almost every hand at Bridge offering some slight mental hurdle to achieve the maximum number of tricks. There are others which require very careful planning to secure the best results—hands, for instance, of the type of the one below, which was played by Mr. Gerald Groesbeck recently at the Deschapelles Club, New York. The fulfillment of the contract requires not only accurate card reading, but correct planning as well. It is true that the plan chosen would not prove successful with a different location of some of the cards, but it was the method best calculated to produce the maximum result, and hence the correct and logical play.

West, Dealer.

	♠ 3 ♡ J 10 6 5 ◇ A 3 ♣ Q 9 8 6 4 2
Mr. Groesbeck ♠ A K J 9 8 7 ♡ A 9 ◇ Q J 8 ♣ A 10	North West East South	♠ 5 2 ♡ Q 4 3 ◇ K 10 7 5 ♣ J 7 5 3
	♠ Q 10 6 4 ♡ K 8 7 2 ◇ 9 6 4 2 ♣ K

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

The Opening bid is, of course, obvious, as is East's response. The bid of three spades, while not absolutely Forcing, practically requires East to find another bid, and East in this situation could do nothing but rebid the notrump response. After all, if West's hand is so powerful as to justify the bid of three spades, the sprinkling of honors in the plain suit may be enough to produce game.

North's Opening lead was the Ace of diamonds, followed by the three. Inasmuch as South had played the deuce to the first lead, this seemed to clearly mark the diamond as a doubleton in the North hand. The second trick was won in the closed hand, and the Ace and King of spades led. When North failed to follow on the second spade lead, Mr. Groesbeck led the Ace of clubs and then the Queen of diamonds, which he overtook with the King in Dummy. On the fourth diamond the club Ten was discarded. Mr. Groesbeck led a small club from Dummy, ruffing in his hand, and then led a spade, forcing South into the lead. Mr. Groesbeck knew that South now held nothing but spades and hearts, and if his holding in hearts included the King, the contract must be made. The end-play was successful, for South led a small heart, which Mr. Groesbeck allowed Dummy's Queen to win, and the contract was fulfilled.

(Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your question to Josephine Culbertson, in care of the Sun-Telegraph.)

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Go places during the warmest day, wearing cool linen. A delightful and useful frock is in yellow linen with a cowl over the back of each shoulder, and brown buttons down the back of the tunic. Worn with a brown and yellow belt. The linen is woven in a tweed weave.

Packing up for a trip means much work and it is best to take as little baggage as possible. Shoes always take up much room, so it is a good idea to invest in white patent leather shoes and sandals that can be worn with everything and can be cleaned with a towel and water.

An old friend by now is the dinner suit, just as nice in the summer as in town during the winter. A new model is done in embroidered white cotton, on strictly tailored lines. The jacket has square buttons of green stones and rhinestones and there are matching links on the turn-back cuffs of the short sleeves.

Given in Marriage -:- A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Lillian Admits Stretching Truth

Lillian's calmness and complacence, as she told me of the ruse she had employed to destroy the tendrils of illusion Avis Arlen was extending toward Hugh Grantland, were so startling to me—and so repugnant—that for several seconds I had no words to answer her final, half-burlesqued comment that "all was fair in love and war," and that I might call her action whichever I chose.

She broke the silence herself with a malicious little chuckle.

"I can see that your Puritan inhibitions are reeling around as if somebody had given 'em an extra shot of hooch," she gibed, "but see if I care! Fortunately, one of the fairies that came to my christening provided me with a thick pad that I can tie over my scrupples any time that I'm dealing with a person devoid of any whatever, such as the Arlen blight.

"But, just to relieve that superheated conscience of yours, I'll tell you that what I did to the Arlen was not on your account at all, but on Hugh's. So, unless you are going to high-hat me on general prinicples because you are shocked at my deficiency in ethics, suppose you come down to my sinful plane and help me figure out what we have to do when morning doth appear."

TALKING NONSENSE

I flushed at her gibing, beneath which I recognized something between pique and serious displeasure.

"You're talking nonsense, and you know it," I told her, with a forced smile. "I'm simply so astonished at your histrionism that I'm practically speechless. I would have taken my oath, while you were talking to Hugh after Avis left, that you disbelieved her story about the man on the ladder."

She looked at me speculatively.

"I wonder just how much your Puritan conscience will stand," she said.

Her tone was faintly ridiculing, and I felt myself flushing. After all, I told myself, this affair which might involve Marion's safety was her busines, not mine.

"Never mind my conscience," I told her a bit tartly. "This is your affair, this eavesdropping, with its possible danger to Marion. You surely have the right to deal with it in your own way."

"Now you're talking!" she said cheerfully. "And as I need every bit of help I can get, I don't propose to have as valuable an ally as Hugh switched ever so slightly from the track by the schemes of a malicious moron like Avis Arlen. So, my darling, I fed him a judicious mixture of truth and the other thing, which served its purpose magnificently. Hugh won't be worrying about Avis being put upon any more, I'll bet two marshmallows.

"But as far as her story is concerned I'll tell you, but not Hugh, that I'm a thousand feet up in the air. My best judgment tells me that it was Sam Brixton who was trying to listen in on our confab, but that yarn of hers about the ladder was pretty plausible, too."

She stretched her arms above her head and flexed the fingers rapidly. When she brought her arms down again, it was with a sudden jerking motion.

MUST KEEP WATCH

"There's only one thing of which we can be certain, and that is that somebody is extremely anxious to find out about this opening of Marion's lock box and the connection Lee Chow has with it. But we can't do anything about that now, except to keep watch every minute. So let's lay that on the table, and proceed to the next in order. How many guests are going to speed tomorrow, or rather today?" as she glanced at her wrist watch with raised eyebrows.

I checked the list off mentally before speaking.

"Ronald and Bob go back to Yale," I said; "Hank and Bill to Worcester, Marion and Carolyn to Whitney Hall. That disposes of the young people. The Brixtons will go this morning, as will Philip Veritzen and the Arlens."

"Leave us hope!" Lillian ejaculated, with a pious intonation.

"The Braithwaites will stay on, of course," I went on with a smile for her nonsense. "Harriet hasn't seen her mother for months. And that concludes the list, except—"

My voice trailed off, and Lillian finished my sentence for me.

"Except for dear Ede," she said.

Cake Making Hint

Paper in which butter, lard, or margarine has been wrapped should be kept for lining tins when making cakes. Rolled up and stored in a cool place, these wrappers will keep fresh for some time.

LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS

What summer wardrobe is complete without its allotment of sweaters? This charming set of sweater blouse and hat lends itself to the gayety of color that every woman wants in her summer clothes. Knitted in a simple stitch the vestee, sleeves and part of the hat are done in a variety of colors and so are set off most effectively against the plain knitting of the rest of the garment. A white sweater with the vestee in red, bright yellow and black with the white would be attractive.

The jacket—a sleeveless one, is done in crochet and, like Joseph's coat, is made entirely of scraps of wool. You can use what you have left over—different colors—different weights of yarn—all done in the simplest of crochet stitches!

Pattern 648 comes to you with complete directions and yardage requirements for making the garments shown; color suggestions and illustrations of the stitches used.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Meeting His Family

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I have been going with a young man for a year and a half and this summer I am to meet his parents and family. Naturally, we have "serious intentions." I am rather puzzled as to what I should do when I am introduced to his mother, father and his sisters and brothers. Shall I extend my hand and say, "How do you do", or just say, "How do you do" without extending my hand?

2—There's another thing that bothers me, too. He, as well as all my other friends, call me by a nickname. With which name should I be introduced to his family?

3—Shall I take a little gift with me when I go to visit them? E.

1—It is customary for people in a home, the hostess, the host and the other members of the family, to shake hands with their guests. This would be especially true when they are meeting and greeting a guest who is so important a guest to them as you are. So, as you are introduced, I am sure that you will find welcoming hands held out for you to shake as you say your gracious "how do you do, Mrs. Allen," "How do you do, Mr. Allen," and so forth.

2—Since this family have probably heard much about you by your nickname, it would seem more appropriately informal for you to be introduced by your nickname.

3—It would be pleasant and generous of you to take a box of flowers with you, or a box of candy. Then, after your visit, when you write your bread-and-butter letter, you might send a more consequential gift, with your letter, to your hostess, the young man's mother.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly let me know if a hat should be worn by the mother at a church wedding?

A MOTHER

If the church wedding is in the day-time, the mother of the bride, like all the other women who attend the wedding, should wear a hat. If the church wedding is in the evening, and is formal, whether or not the mother wears a hat or some other "covering for her head," depends on the regulations of the denomination of the church.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

A dull nail file is as maddening as a toothbrush that is shedding bristles. Don't bear with it. Buy the best file you can find, one of high grade steel, with fine sharp grains that cut quickly.

Reducing bands to be worn over ankles that have grown too plump can be purchased. You'll find them in some corset shops, nearly all stores that deal with surgical supplies.

At night give the ankles a heavy massage treatment. Oil the palms of the hands, smooth the flesh with an upward motion with plenty of pressure. Pick up flesh in small folds, rool between the fingers.

Silky hair and lovely expressisve eyes are the chief attractions in the galaxy of facial features. When they are present the uncertain nose and chin don't matter much.

The heavenly coiffure is possible to every woman, though her thatch be thin and the color not any too alluring. Beauty shops have developed hairdressing to a high art, using the finger wave which is a perfect reproduction of the natural undulation, showing trees ends circled into ringlets.

As for eyes, their greatest charm is the light that shines from them. Any girl who is animated and in good health can turn on the glimmer in her soul globes.

The road to good looks is no longer rough and toilsome. And we're not chasing rainbows any more, relying upon artifice. We're getting down to first principles. And that's something. It's a forward step.

SLUMPING BUCS, CHAMPION GIANTS OPEN SERIES HERE

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Hitters Have Pet Fields. Cavalcade Runs Again. Assault on Mile Record.

Only the unusual happening that all four first-division clubs were defeated by the second-flight teams saved the Pirates from losing ground to one or more rival pennant contenders yesterday when the Bucs suffered their third trimming in four games with the Dodgers, the first series lost on the home grounds this season. Today the slumping Rovers faced the necessity of taking an immediate brace and doing some tall figuring to stay among the leaders and keep out of the second division, for a continuance of the disappointing form shown in the series with Brooklyn would mean in the four-game set with Bill Terry's Giants a setback from which the Gibsons might never recover.

Bill Terry

And turning back the New Yorkers in their present drive threatened to be a considerable job. Prior to yesterday's defeat, in Cincinnati, the Giants won five games in a row. They have won eight of their last 10, 15 of their last 19, and 17 of their last 22 games, and have been beaten twice in succession in a stretch of 29 engagements, or since the Cubs did it on May 13 and 14. The only Pittsburgh hope was that the Corsairs would show another of the odd form reversals in which they had played their poorest ball at home against the weak clubs and their best against the strong ones. Unfortunately the same dope has not applied abroad, as on foreign lots the Picaroons lost all of their last seven games with pennant rivals—two to the Giants, three to the Cubs and two to the Cardinals.

WEAVER SEEN AS SAVING CUB SLAB STAFF

Jim Weaver is the big hope of the Cub pitching department. That goes for his ability as well as for his size. He stands 6 feet 6 inches above sea level and makes the scales groan at 230 pounds, and Chicago fans and critics are confident that he will continue to show slab power in keeping with his proportions. Since Weaver turned in his third straight victory for the Bruins, following his acquisition from Newark, Windy City bugs are viewing him as being just the man to save Charley Grimm's mound staff from bogging down by giving it the extra prop that was urgently needed.

Weaver has a good forkball, pretty fair control and plenty of courage. He has beaten the Cardinals, Dodgers and Reds, allowed only one run in a stretch of 18 innings, and turned in his best game when he defeated Bill Hallahan, 1 to 0. Counting the two victories he scored for the Browns in the spring over the Red Sox and Senators, Big Jim has a clean record of five straight wins in the majors this year.

DICKEY FINDS SHIBE PARK HITTING EDEN

Some players hit particularly well in certain parks. For example, Dick Bartell, of the Phils, and Bill Jurges, of the Cubs, are harder to get out at Forbes Field than anywhere else in the National League, not excepting their home lots. With eight hits in 13 times at bat, Bartell batted .615 in three games here this year, and in the same number of games Jurges made six safeties in 12 trips to the plate for a mark of .500. Dan Taylor got 10 hits in 17 tries and Koenecke nine hits in 18 trips in the Dodger series.

Bill Dickey

Bill Dickey, Yankee catcher, appears to have greater success than any other major league batsman this season at finding a particular park green pastures. If the Yanks could play all of their games at Shibe Park in Philadelphia, Dickey would be the greatest hitter in the history of baseball, provided he kept up the pace at which he has traveled there this year. For in 23 times at bat on the home grounds of the A's, Bill has smacked out 17 hits for an average of .739. Speaking of streaks against certain opponents, Mark Koenig of the Reds, placed an unusual performance to his credit at the expense of the Cubs, a club that discarded him. When Koenig batted safely in his first time up in the opening game of the recent Red-Cub series it marked his seventh consecutive hit against Chicago pitchers. Before the game ended, he added two more, and next day he got three, making a total of 12 hits in 15 times at bat against Cub hurlers.

CAVALCADE TRIES FOR ANOTHER DERBY

Cavalcade goes again today. The most talked about horse of the year will make a try for another big stake this afternoon in the Detroit Derby. Already the star of Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's string has won the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs and the American Derby at Chicago, and his only defeat was administered by a stablemate, High Quest, to which he finished second in the Preakness at Pimlico. Any race that is called a derby appears to be Cavalcade's dish, and it won't be surprising if he comes home first again in the feature event of the Detroit meeting. He will be coupled with Time Clock.

The field opposing Cavalcade will be made up largely of horses which he has beaten once or twice, including Discovery, Chicstraw, Mata Hari and Bien Fait, the last named a former Bradley horse now owned by W. C. Stroube.

WORLD MILE RECORD MAY BE IN DANGER

When Jack Lovelock, of Oxford, at Palmer Stadium in Princeton last July, tore off the fastest mile ever run by a human and set up an amazing new world record of 4 minutes 7.6 seconds, track experts predicted the mark would stand for years. But already it's in danger. For as the feature of an invitation meet on the same fast track late this afternoon, while that other college classic, the Poughkeepsie regatta, is being rowed on the Hudson, there will be a special mile run bringing together Glenn Cunningham, of Kansas; Bill Bonthron, of Princeton, and Gene Venzke, of Penn, the greatest three-milers in America, and the winner of that speed struggle is likely to approach Lovelock's mark very closely, if he does not actually beat it.

Glenn Cunningham

A big factor behind Lovelock's achievement was the terrific pressure placed on him by Bonthron, who ran the same race in 4:08.7 to establish a new American record. Applying a similar force to Cunningham today, Bonthron, if he does not win the event himself, may at least push the great Kansan to a performance that will hold a new world record among its possibilities. Venzke may have a peak day and worry both rivals, but it is not likely. The race appears to be between Cunningham and Bonthron, with history-making in prospect.

DEMPSEY BIG FACTOR IN BAER'S WIN

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Jack Dempsey was in the ring against Primo Carnera in the Long Island City Bowl Thursday night. Not actually, but in spirit.

His hand was to be seen in the manner in which Baer turned killer. There was a reminder of the Dempsey of Toledo and the Polo Grounds as Baer deliberately violated the rule against standing over a prostrate opponent, waiting to hit him again as soon as he got up. He got away with it several times before Referee Arthur Donovan saved him from losing on a foul by preventing him from hitting Primo before the latter could get up on one of his floorings. Max had the swing all set to go.

LONG COUNT RECALLED

It will be remembered that Dempsey stood over and got behind Jess Willard at Toledo and used the same tactics against Luis Firpo in New York, after which all of the boxing commissions clamped down on the rule which calls for a boxer to retreat to the farthest neutral corner after knocking down his opponent. Failure to retreat immediately to the proper corner cost Jack a knockout in the famous battle of the Long Count, his second meeting with Gene Tunney, at Chicago.

There was the old Dempsey snarl and the old Dempsey punch in Baer against Carnera. The old killer instinct which has been absent from the ring since the passing of Dempsey.

Before the fight, Carnera was in a panic, it develops, over the idea of entering the ring without his manager and protector, Bill Duffy, in his corner. Duffy is serving time in an income tax case. Someone had instilled in Carnera the fear that Dempsey would "load" Baer, and he talked of horseshoes in Baer's gloves. He must have thought they were there when he was hit the first time.

PRIMO LONELY MAN

Primo was the lonely man. Already badly beaten mentally by Baer's prodding before the fight, he pleaded to be allowed to have Benny Leonard, the former lightweight champion, in his corner, but his mentors picked Dan Morgan instead. Just before the call to action there was a stormy scene in Carnera's dressing room over the choice of handlers, and then Primo, badly upset in confidence, entered the ring and was the victim of a bit of strategy in being made to wait and add to his nervousness as Baer delayed his arrival for three full minutes.

Carnera's demoralized state of mind was evident when he hastened to get up after each knockdown. When he arose the first time he was in a panic and took it on the run with Baer in pursuit. The three knockdowns in the second round, with Baer tumbling on top of him, didn't help his morale, and his courage-

Movies Show How Baer Toppled Giant Carnera

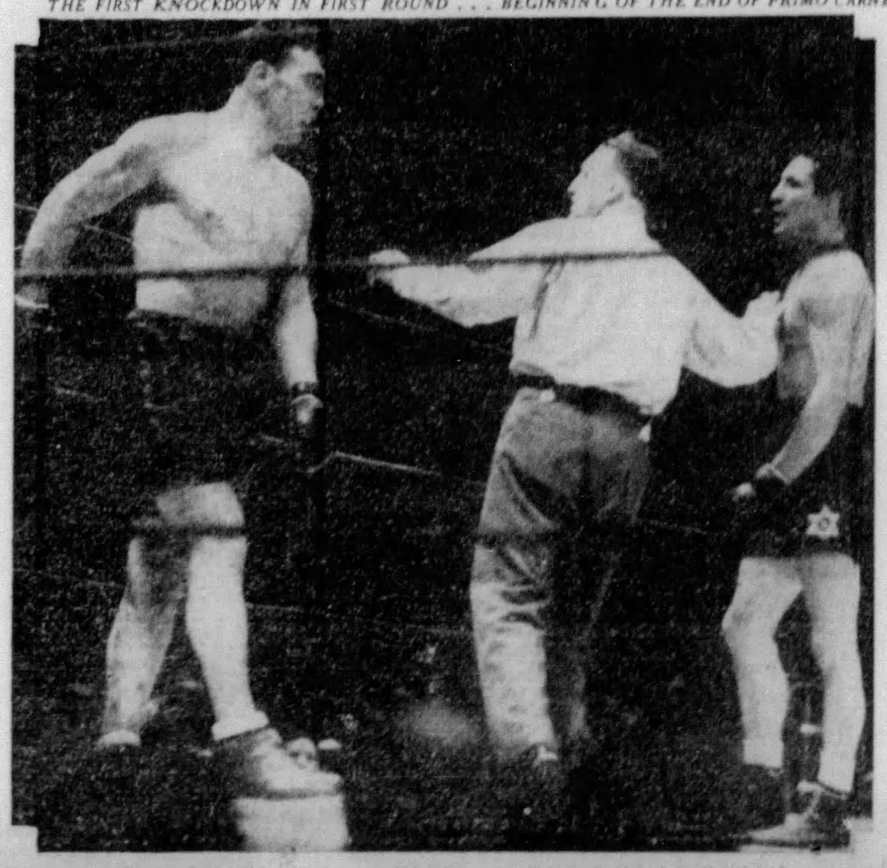
THE FIRST KNOCKDOWN IN FIRST ROUND . . . BEGINNING OF THE END OF PRIMO CARNERA'S REIGN AS CHAMPION



Revealing clips from the official movies of the Carnera-Baer bout, showing Baer scoring the first knockdown in the first round. Carnera was a beaten man from that point on. He fell backward heavily, landed on his right side and rolled over to his left and got up to be battered until the bell rang. Note that Baer is violating the rules by not retiring to the farthest neutral corner. He did this repeatedly in the early rounds. Read the rows in sequence from top to bottom. These enlargements are from official moving pictures of fight supplied through courtesy of Harry O. Voller by International News Photograph Service.

Memphis Bill Terry brought his world champions to town today, the Giants to be the big attraction at the Oakland Orchard on four successive afternoons. The high spot of the series will be reached tomorrow as the New Yorkers make their Sunday bow in Pittsburgh.

Pirate officials today reported a big advance sale for the games of this afternoon and tomorrow. Although the Buccos have been in a severe slump, their followers know they always put their best foot forward when competing against any New York entry. Hence, the big demand for seats.

BUCS FAR BEHIND

As the battles get under way, the Pirates are five and one-half games below the leaders. The Gibsons took another painful defeat yesterday at the hands of the so-called lowly Dodgers who made it three out of four in a series in which the Pirates had looked for three successes.

The in-and-out play of the Pirates has stung Gibson to the quick. The Bucco boss has ordered morning practice for the slumping athletes, but the fans are skeptical as to whether forenoon workouts will have any noticeable effect on a pitching staff that is given to "staggeritis."

The initial clash of the Pirates will bring a duel of two fine southpaws. The one and only Carl Hubbell is slated to flip his screwballs for the champs and he will be opposed by Ralph Birkofer, sturdy Toronto graduate.

The same two lefthanders hooked up in a great match at the Polo Grounds not long ago. At that time only one run was recorded and as the Giants made it they had the laugh on the Pirates.

The same series in New York that brought Hubbell and Birkofer and French together marks the date of the slowing down of the Bucco machine. The Pirates tasted of two sally doses on the same afternoon and have hardly been the same since.

DODGERS HIT HARD

Casey Stengel's suckers touched up three Pirate pitchers for 16 hits yesterday as the Dodgers made off with the final contest, 6 to 4.

Red Lucas felt the spleen of the Brooklyn bats before he retired. Red faced the enemy through six rounds during which time the Dodgers made four runs and 11 hits. Lee Chagnon and Bill Swift finished.

The Dodgers scored three runs in the first three rounds, but the Pirates rode for a tie in the fourth. The invaders clinched the game in the sixth by scoring twice.

It was the old story of a second-rate lefthander and the Pirates. Big Tom Zachary couldn't help Bill McKechnie because he couldn't face the Pirates often enough, it seemed.

ZACHARY TOUGH

The Bucs really were getting onto Tom as he pitched in a Boston uniform, but he showed up here in a Dodger suit and did his stuff through nine rounds. Good support helped him out a lot, but he finished, nevertheless.

Gus Suhr rocked Thomas with a homer in the sixth, but none was on the sacks and the Pirates were two in arrears when the blow was struck.

CHILLYSAUCE

Lack of team-play was so apparent in the last Dodger tilt the fans could not be blamed for thinking the Bucco club was set for a second division berth.

It was too late today to make any more major-league deals. The line itself showed no additional changes. The Pirates will have to rely on their acquisitions for minor league pickings.

What a great thing it would be if Gibby had Van Mungo. Mungo will not score a flag for the Dodgers this season, but he might swing one were he a Bucco, Cub or Cardinal. What a pitcher!

CRACK CREWS AWAIT START OF POUGHKEEPSIE REGATTA

COAST EIGHTS RULE CHOICES FOR CLASSIC

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 16.—(AP.)—A wide open tussle for the four-mile varsity championship of the Poughkeepsie regatta loomed today as the seven contenders prepared for the start late this afternoon.

Among most experts, there was a disposition to ignore only Columbia in forecasting the possible winner although the two Far Western boatloads, Washington and California, still were rated favorites. Cornell and Syracuse, especially the latter, were figured as the main Eastern hopes although both Navy and Pennsylvania were conceded at least an outside chance of capturing the main prize.

Strictly on a time trial basis, Jim Wray's big Cornell eight deserved top ranking. The Ithacans were timed unofficially in 19 minutes, five seconds for the full course, fastest time of the pre-regatta training period. Washington's best time, in unofficial clockings, was 19:07; Navy's, 19:41; Penn, 19:50; California, 19:58; Syracuse, 20:07, and Columbia somewhat higher.

Syracuse has worked hardest during the past few days and the Orange may turn out to be the crew to beat.

All 18 crews—the seven varsity boats, five junior varsity and six freshman eights—took their last hard workouts Thursday and the oarsmen spent yesterday resting and storing up energy for today, going out only for loosening up paddles late in the afternoon.

All hotel reservations were taken several days ago and the demand for seats on the observation train, which paces the racing crews down the river on the west bank, was so heavy that three additional cars were ordered to the 13 originally scheduled and all the seats now have been sold.

It is still a far cry from the 32-car trains of the 1928 and 1929 regattas, but encouraging in these times and presages a crowd of from 25,000 to 30,000.

All three races will be rowed late in the afternoon to get the best conditions of wind and tide, with the freshman scheduled to get away on their two-mile row at 4:45, eastern standard time, followed at hour intervals by the Jayvees, rowing three miles, and the Varsity in the four-mile pull at 6:45.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: AN EYELESS SEER—Prof. Nicholas Saunderson, of Cambridge (1682-1739), lost his eyes at the age of 12 months when he contracted smallpox. Notwithstanding this handicap, he lectured in Cambridge at the age of 25 on the subjects of hydrostatics, mechanics, sounds, tides and, most wonderful of all, astronomy and optics. Truly it was said of him that "he had no eyes, but taught others how to use theirs." He had a good ear for music and could distinguish the fifth part of a note. He could tell falsificates from genuine Roman medals by touch alone. He could judge the size of a room and his own distance from the walls by sound.

MONDAY: UPSIDE DOWN BELFRY.

WEST PENN NET TITLE EVENT ON TODAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The forty-sixth annual Western Pennsylvania tennis championships will break away to action this afternoon. Men's singles play is scheduled to monopolize attention today, tomorrow and Monday, with men's doubles, women's singles and doubles, and mixed doubles slated to follow along thereafter. With upwards of 100 entrants in the man-to-man division, inaugural hostilities will be divided between the clay courts of the Stanton Heights Golf Club, official site of the event, and those of the Pittsburgh Golf Club, which kindly has consented to handle the overflow for the day.

Chairman Frank S. Smith has announced that all first round matches are to be completed by nightfall, the sole exceptions to this regulation being contests in which out-of-town contenders are involved. Visitors have until Monday to report for action, but those who have not drawn byes will be compelled to scrimmage twice that afternoon, if they contrive to get past their initial opponents.

OHIOANS ENTERED

Following the release of the men's singles pairings late Thursday, there came fairly definite word yesterday that three mid-Western additions might be made to the original roster of exactly 100 performers. The entry of Lowell Wingerd, Grand Rapids veteran, who has given good account of himself in several previous West Penn classics, was received early yesterday morning after being delayed in transit. At about the same time, Ralph Oster, Cleveland net mogul, called President Bob Schmertz, of the Pittsburgh Association and asked that places be arranged for Leonard Keith, crack Forest City offsider, who played here a year ago, and for Paul Graibner, clever Buckeye junior.

Though the seeding of 12 outstanding luminaries assures the scattering of the talent through the bracket, there are enough high grade masculine combatants beyond the chosen pale to render a flock of fast tussles from the very start of the meeting. In the upper half, which has been assigned to Stanton Heights, the most promising session brings together Frank Smith, ninth in the rating, and Harry Wald, former Pitt satellite.

BROWNS TO MEET

Over at the Pittsburgh Golf Club, the battle of the Browns, John, of Belmont, and Stanley, of the Allegheny Country Club, snatches keen attention, but the real wallop-fest should be between giant Hub Rinehart, Stanton smasher, and Bob Grier, youthful Rockwood left-hander, who has had a fine season at Westminster College and who last Saturday upset Frank McClintock, University Club crack, in an inter-club marathon.

Aside from Frank Smith, few of the seeded crew will face first stanza menace. Champion John O'Loughlin is booked with Bill Fay, West Penn boys' premier; brother Dave O'Loughlin tangles with Roland Neal; Frank Broida goes for his clubmate, Don Monjot; Charley Lockhart is paired with Jack Rubin; George Henderson, who trimmed Ted Rosenthal after the latter had eliminated John O'Loughlin in the major reversal of the 1933 Allegheny County tournament, again tries conclusions with Rosenthal, and Billy O'Loughlin makes his first 1934 appearance on any court by skirmishing with Fred Brenner.

Entries for the men's, women's, and mixed doubles and the women's singles will be received until Monday evening at tournament headquarters at Stanton Heights.

Honus Says:

By HONUS WAGNER
Former Star, Now Coach of Pirates

To the Sports Editor:

You learn a lot by just reading the newspapers. I just learned that if my hat blows into a cage full of lions, I should let the lions have the hat and I should forget it and call it a day. A fellow's hat blew into a cage in England and a keeper tried to get it out, but it didn't work. The lions kept the hat and the keeper, too. I think too many young fellows today get too upset when their hats blow off, and they try to go into the lions' cage. This is no more a young man's world today than it ever was, but you gotta live a long time before you get enough sense not to take hats away from a lion. Who started all this, anyway?

Honus Wagner

HONUS WAGNER.

GIANTS' LUCK HOLDS GOOD

Associated Press.

The "luck" of the Giants seems to be working again.

They provided an example yesterday when they dropped a game to Cincinnati, 2 to 1, despite a five-hit hurling job by Fred Fitzsimmons.

But while New York lost, they were lucky in that all the other first-division clubs also lost. The second-place Cardinals succumbed to Boston's 19-hit assault on four pitchers by a 10-to-4 count. The Phillies conquered Chicago's Cubs, 4 to 3, in 10 innings after Dolph Camilli, traded by Chicago Monday, clouted a ninth-inning homer with one on to tie the score. Completing the rout, the Brooklyn Dodgers turned back the fourth-place Pittsburgh Pirates, 6 to 4.

Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees, reached into his pitching grab-bag and pulled forth Danny MacFayden, who hadn't won a game since April. Danny hurled a five-hit game to beat the Browns, 6 to 3, and enabled the Yanks to hold their margin of four percentage points over the Tigers.

Detroit slammed out an 11-to-4 decision over the Boston Red Sox. Cleveland's third-place Indians beat the Athletics, 12 to 6, and Washington took an 8-to-7 decision over Chicago.

SCHOOL NET PLAY OPENS

Some 50 youthful netmen were expected for inaugural play of the twenty-second annual City High School senior and junior tennis championships as the historic local scholastic event got under way on the 10 courts of Frick Park this morning. With C. Lawrence Walsh, City high school physical education supervisor, who has handled the affair since its inception in 1913, directing the action, the Saturday program calls for completion of two rounds of hostilities before the first halt.

Oliver Hurst, Allderdice contender, reigns the favorite over the remainder of a nicely balanced, but not outstandingly strong, field. Ralph Bald, Jimmy Arensberg and Allerton Miller, leading secondary school racqueters of the district, are ineligible for City competition. Hurst holds the Pittsburgh Center boys' crown and is perhaps the most experienced contestant in the conclave.

Twenty-five institutions will be permitted to send representatives to the Frick milling. Under the peculiar rule of battle in vogue for the City tournament, first round winners in each division will compete among themselves, as will first round losers. At the conclusion of these eliminations, the runner-up in the winners' bracket will meet the survivor of the losers' group and the victor in this tussle will engage the triumphant lad in the winners' section for the championship. There will be medals for first, second and third honors among both seniors and juniors.

U. S. NET ACES ADD TO LEAD IN CUP PLAY

WIMBLEDON, Eng., June 16.—The United States swept into a 3-1 lead in the battle for the Wightman Cup today when Helen Jacobs, of California, American national champion, defeated Dorothy Round, of Great Britain, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4.

Miss Jacobs achieved her second singles triumph of the series, which began yesterday on Wimbledon's famous center court, after two bitterly fought sets. Yesterday she pounded out a one-sided 6-1, 6-1 victory over Margaret (Peggy) Scriven.

All that remains for the United States' forces to win the cup for the fourth consecutive year is one victory in the two remaining singles and one doubles encounter.

Miss Jacobs and little Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, Mass., yesterday gave the United States victory in both singles matches. England won the doubles encounter, Nancy Lyle and Evelyn Pearman prevailing over Josephine Cruickshank and Carolin Babcock.

MILERS AFTER WORLD MARK

PRINCETON, N. J., June 16.—(AP.)—The two fastest American milers of all time, Bill Bonthron, of Princeton, and Glenn Cunningham, of Kansas, match strides for the third time today in a long anticipated outdoor duel that, with favorable conditions, may smash the world record.

The mile run, with Pennsylvania's Gene Venzke as the third starter, will climax Princeton's special invitation track meet, bringing together a hand-picked group of nationally famous athletes under circumstances favoring some extraordinary performances. There are only five events, all told, with four running events, ranging from the quarter mile to two miles, and the pole vault. Only 21 performers are to compete but they include some of the foremost college stars, past and present.

Ten thousand tickets have been sold in advance and Princeton athletic authorities expect close to 30,000 in Palmer Stadium, when the first event is called. Proceeds will help defrey expenses of the combined Princeton-Cornell track team's visit to England this summer.

Golf Lead Shared In Western Open

PEORIA, Ill., June 16.—(AP.)—Already baked and burned by a relentless sun, the Peoria Country Club course got another real scorching yesterday as 214 fairway bombardiers, many of them back from their futile battle in the National Open at Merion, Pa., opened the 72-hole fight for the Western Open golf championship.

So withering was the fire that a quartet of professionals routed par by four shots with 68's to go into a quadruple deadlock for first place; five others shot 69's, while nine more steamed over the tree-lined but badly baked fairways with 71's.

Walter Hagen, of Detroit; Johnny Revolta, of Milwaukee, and Ky Laffoon, of Denver, two of the finest pros of the younger generation, and Harry Hampton, 47-year-old Scot from Chicago, were the 68 shooters.

DEMPSEY BIG RING FACTOR

What of Baer's future? At the moment there is no outstanding challenger. Carnera is supposed to get a return bout, but it won't be forthcoming for a year at least, and Maxie will be busy coining money in the movies, on the stage and through the radio in the meantime. Carnera may not want that return match. Unless he can change his frame of mind regarding Baer he would be a beaten man again before he entered the ring. Baer has his number, no doubt about that. The manner in which the Californian dominated the Italian both before and during their bout was little short of hypnotic.

One of the interested spectators at the Carnera-Baer fight the other night was Johnny Donnelly, formerly of Uniontown, a good lightweight boxer in his time. Donnelly now is connected with the Secret Service and is stationed in New York.

CONFIRMED BY LEONARD

NEW YORK, June 16.—(INS.)—Primo Carnera licked himself long before he entered the ring with Max Baer at Long Island City Thursday night, according to Benny Leonard, one-time lightweight champion. Leonard said:

"I switched from Carnera to Baer Thursday morning after talking to Carnera in his hotel room.

"I never saw a man more badly rattled or scared in my life. He took me aside, and, his eyes rolling around, nervously questioned me about reports that Jack Dempsey would be in Baer's corner. He told me he heard Dempsey put lead weights in bandages and spilled something on gloves to make a fighter blind. Why, the big fellow was just scared blue.

"I tried to reassure him and tell him those reports were all bunk. But I couldn't make him believe it. He had been badly scared and he stayed that way. He moaned because Bill Duffy wouldn't be with him. He said Duffy was the only man he could depend upon.

"You could see as the fight progressed that Carnera didn't have a chance. He made no real attempt to nail Baer. He seemed afraid to let a punch go. He let Baer walk around him at will. That's what fear can do for a fighter."

Cards Get Fullis For George Davis

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—(AP.)—President Gerald Nugent, of the Phillies of the National League, has announced a trade with the St. Louis Cardinals by which George Davis, centerfielder, returns to the Phils in exchange for Outfielder Chick Fullis. The deal was a straight player transaction.

JAYS, GENERALS PACE SETTERS

Thanks to the McKeesport Bucs, the Jeannette Jays and Washington Generals maintained their respective positions at the top of the Penn State Association standings yesterday. While the Jays and Generals were splitting a double header, McKeesport bumped off Charleroi, 6 to 1, behind the fine hurling of Hutsell, newest addition to the Bucs' slab staff.

Jeannette took a terrific walloping in the first game with Washington, bowing by an 18-to-1 count, but in the second, Jessen held the Generals safe and the Jays evened matters, winning, 6 to 1.

Playing at Greensburg, the Greensburg entry took advantage of a pair of errors by Duggan, Monessen second sacker, to score a run in the ninth inning and won, 4 to 3.

MRS. JESSUP WINS

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—(AP.)—Mrs. Marion Z. Jessup, of Wilmington, won permanent possession of the Pennsylvania and Eastern States women's tennis championship trophy at the Merion Cricket Club yesterday by defeating Mrs. John Van Ryn, top-seeded player, 6-3, 6-3.

Two games will feature the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's amateur softball tournament play today. The Goodwill Industries softballers are to play the Hugh A. McMaster Flowers team at Sewickley this evening in the senior class of bracket II, and the Covington Aces will be the opposition for the Schenley Falcons in a bracket II game of the junior competition. The Aces-Falcon contest will be staged on the Schenley High School field this afternoon.

Young Henry Flowers is Manager Jackie Ejzak's selection to pitch against the McMasters. Flowers is a good looking prospect in the hurling ranks. He is a lanky youngster.

The E. J. Noftz won their first game in Bracket II of the senior class by downing the Kirby team, 20 to 5, at Marshall field yesterday. Lose fielding caused plenty of confusion in the Kirby ranks. The Nofts are a hard hitting team and will cause many a pitcher grief in softball circles.

Edythe Forsythe's brilliant pitching enabled the Goldenson Vanities to defeat St. Ann's, 10 to 4, in a bracket II game of the girls' division. She allowed six hits in the seventh inning contest and hit a home run. Frances House, Forsyth's battery mate also played a wonderful game. Lois Shields and Mae Price each hit a triple. The Vanities scored six runs in the second inning and were never headed.

The Gabbel Cyclists won from the New Kensington Merchants, 10 to 1, in an Intermediate Division game. Justham, of the victors, hit two home runs. Shoupe led the batters with four hits.

The Ford City Macks scored a 5-to-1 triumph over the Pechans in a Bracket VI game of the Senior Division. Mihalak's hitting and Ollinger's fine catching were the highlights of the game.

STOCKS RISE ON STEEL NEWS

NEW YORK, June 16.—Stocks pushed higher from the start of trading today. Advances of fractions to as much as two points prevailed over a wide range. All steel shares were firm. Volume tapered following initial briskness.

Du Pont and United States Smelting each got up around two points, while shares showing gains of sizeable fractions to a point or more included National Steel, Case, Bethlehem, United States Steel, New York Central, Santa Fe, American Telephone, Sears Roebuck and Westinghouse.

Suspension of steel hostilities relieved Wall street of apprehension that a tieup of the industry might interrupt activity in motor and and other manufacturing lines which consume steel in quantity.

AUTO SALES GAIN

With price cutting stimulating retail sales of motor cars, Cram estimated motor production this week had increased 2,188 units over the previous week to 71,293, against 57,511 in the corresponding week a year ago. Chevrolet reported dealers had sold 25,935 units in the first 10 days of June, compared with 21,688 in the like period of May.

Market observers attached significance to the firm trend of commodity prices lately, as shown in various indices of wholesale and spot commodity prices. The Moody daily index of spot commodity prices has attained a new peak for the year at 140.9.

ACCEPTANCES DROP

Although business held near the best levels of the spring rise last month, the volume of outstanding bankers' acceptances, used to finance trade, shrank to a new low, according to the American Acceptance Council. The total volume of acceptances outstanding May 31, of $568,790,514 compared with the previous low of $582,634,000 on August 31, 1926. Shrinkage for the month, compared with April, was $44,338,623. The low yielded on acceptances, rather than falling off in trade, was held chiefly responsible for the decline.

Renewed activity in the private capital field was expected with the completion yesterday of arrangements by investment houses for separation of banking and underwriting business.

Foreign exchanges were quiet in early dealings. Sterling opened off 1/8 of a cent at $5.05.

Uncle Sam Studies Goldenrod Rubber

FT. MYERS, Fla., June 16.—(AP.)—Rubber, harvested like grain from fields of common goldenrod—the last brilliant dream of the late Thomas Alva Edison—has been accepted by Uncle Sam and experts from the United States division of plant exploration and introduction now are working in close conjunction with the Edison Botanical Research toward this end.

That the government has become actively interested in methods of extracting commercial rubber from goldenrod, was revealed here by Charles Edison, son of the late inventor.

Court Forbids Use Of A. & P. Insignia

In an opinion handed down by Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker the A. & P. Cleaners & Dyers, Inc., of Washington, Pa., with stores in various towns in Western Pennsylvania, was enjoined from using capital letter "A. & P." It was in an action brought by the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, who alleged the defendant concern had infringed upon its insignia.

RESERVES PILE UP IN U. S. TREASURY

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, June 16. — We should all be noting what is going on in the banking situation. After all, it is our money and credit which is involved.

1—In the federal reserve system, the holdings of "gold certificates" (so-called), last week increased $81,000,000. Actual gold in the U. S. Treasury, however, increased only $30,000,000. Evidently therefore, the Treasury printed up $51,000,000 of "certificates" on the strength of its so-called "free gold." This represents some of the government's paper "profit" on reducing the amount of gold in the theoretical dollar.

In the last 30 days, the New Dealers have shot $200,000,000 of this inflation into the reserve banks. They are "spending" this inflation in their schemes of "reform" and "relief."

2—The reserve deposits of the member banks increased again, and equal about 3.9 billion dollars. This is chiefly due to government spending.

These deposits made by member banks with the reserve banks are far in excess of legal requirements. The excess is called "excess reserves." The sum of this excess reserve is now about 1.8 billion dollars which is a new high record.

RESERVE GROWS

It shows that despite great pressure, the member banks can find no use to make of their funds, so they just leave them in the reserve. The plain fact is that reporting member bank loans are $414,000,000 less than a year ago, although their demand deposits are 1.5 millions larger.

3—The trouble is that the deposits and excess reserves have been artificially built up by government borrowing and spending. They do not represent real business.

While the member bank loans have decreased, their "investments" in government paper have increased about 1.3 billion dollars, or nearly as much as their demand deposits. Their investments are far above their loans, and two-thirds of these investments are in government debt.

Nearly 99 per cent of the Federal Reserve Bank loans and investments consist of government paper. The holdings of government bills and certificates increased last week.

Another item which grew larger last week was "brokers' loans," which were up 14 millions. This item is now over $1,000,000,000 again. It seems to be "on the way" to the good old new era proportions.

But note that it no longer represents stock market excesses. It tells of government financing, and represents borrowing by "dealers" to carry government paper.

REPRESENTS BORROWING

Instead of swelling brokers' loans to carry new era corporation "split-ups" and "rights," we find New Deal issues being floated for the government "partnership."

Instead of new era stock market speculation, we find New Deal experimentation in "the more abundant life."

Instead of Mr. Mellon, we find Mr. Morgenthau.

But it all comes down to brokers' loans, and to debt—in both cases.

We criticize the new era manipulation and speculation with "O. P. M." (other peoples' money). Why, then, should we now sit by and watch a little group of New Dealers play with our money?

They take it away from those who have any, by taxation and dollar devaluation. Then they gamble ("experiment") with it, through speculation in corporate securities by R. F. C. building non-profit making dams and installing electric refrigerators.

Bank Acceptance Volume Under '33

NEW YORK, June 16.—Bankers acceptances outstanding on May 31 totaled $568,790,514, compared with $613,129,137 on April 30, and $668,811,328 in the same month a year ago, it was announced by the American Acceptance Council.

Weekly Bank Clearings

NEW YORK, June 16.—(AP.)—Although below the total for the preceding seven-day period bank clearings have risen above the 1933 comparative figures for the first time in three weeks. The total this week at all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $4,604,705,000, an increase of 3.5 per cent over the amount reported for the corresponding week of 1933. At New York City, clearings were $3,117,219,000, a loss of only 1.4 per cent, as compared with a decrease of 9.5 per cent a week earlier, while the total of $1,487,486,000 for all outside centers was higher by 15.6 per cent than that of a year ago.

Clearings were substantially higher at a number of the outside centers. This was especially true at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis, Kansas City, Atlanta, New Orleans and Dallas. Heavy government financing contributed something to the larger amount the past week. The total was $431,954,000 below that for the first week of June, when bank settlements are usually higher, whereas a year ago for the same two weeks, the reduction was $680,212,000.

Figures for leading cities, showing increases and decreases as compared with those of last year, are printed herewith:

RAILS EXPAND PURCHASES

NEW YORK, June 16.—The Railway Age presents data in its current issue which shows that "the rehabilitation of railroad physical properties has begun, although only begun." Purchases from manufacturers of equipment and supplies are shown to have increased from about $95,000,000 in the first five months of 1933 to about $225,000,000 in the first five months of 1934, or 137 per cent, "and these expenditures include only part of the total to be made with money borrowed from the government." In the same months the average number of employes (exclusive of switching and terminal companies) increased from 934,264 to 996,482, or 62,218. The number in May, 1933 was 938,406 and in May, 1934, it was $1,043,064, a largest number of employes in any month since May, 1932.

Orders for equipment and rail in the first five months of 1934 included 74 locomotives, 21,397 freight cars, 306 passenger cars and 705,479 tons of rail, representing expenditures of approximately $70,000,000 for equipment and $26,000,000 for rail. Orders placed in the first five months of 1933 involved expenditures of only about $3,500,000 for equipment and $3,600,000 for rail and included only three locomotives, 530 freight cars, 6 passenger cars and approximately 90,000 tons of rail.

'DEFAULT DAY' ADDS POINT TO TRADE STUDY

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Yesterday was default day, and the shunning of obligations by foreign governments gave added point to George N. Peek's analysis of foreign trade.

Mr. Rukeyser

Peek's general thesis is that exports and imports must balance. In general, he feels that, if merchandise must be given away, instead of sold, it should be distributed within our own borders.

The balance sheet conception is arresting. Until the MacMillan report in Great Britain in 1931 questioned the validity of estimates concerning international balance of payments, the British were living in a fool's paradise. The ship toward protectionism there is largely responsible for the pickup in British trade.

As the facts concerning the United States are better computed, the limitations on foreign trade opportunities will become apparent, and increasing emphasis will be laid on generating prosperity through raising living standards at home.

CHRYSLER SEES GAIN

Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the Chrysler Corporation, and an outstanding leader of an outstanding industry, told me that he anticipates a 25 per cent increase in retail sales of automobiles this year as compared with the record for 1933. He said:

"It seems to me, that as long as the automobile industry is permitted to carry on in the courageous spirit of progress which has been responsible for its growth, we need have no doubts about its future course.

"I believe the keynote of the automobile industry is progress. This is represented not only in its engineering research, production methods and products, but also in the broad statesmanlike policy it has pursued in reference to its industrial relations. I cannot tell you better what I mean than by quoting the President of the United States in a statement of March 26, when he said: 'Having pioneered in mechanical invention to a point where the whole world marvels at the perfection and economy of American motor cars and their widespread ownership by our citizens in every walk of life, this industry has indicated now its willingness to undertake a pioneer effort in human engineering.'"

LEADS INDUSTRY

The Chrysler Corporation has been succeeding even better than the industry as a whole this year. Chrysler revealed:

"In the first five months of this year Chrysler Motors sold to distributors and dealers more than twice as many passenger and commercial cars as were sold in the first five months of last year. Every division of the corporation, including the airflow lines, which represented a new kind of automobile, exceeded last year's volume. Truck sales were just under four times what they were last year.

"In retail sales to the public during the first four months of this year, the latest period for which new passenger car registrations are available, Chrysler Motors increased its percentage of the total passenger automobile business from 21.1 per cent in 1933 to 23.8 per cent in 1934. In the lowest price market Plymouth increased its sales to the public from 13.0 per cent to 16.6 per cent of the total automobile business of the country.

"This year distributors and dealers of Chrysler motor products did over one-third of all the passenger car business of member companies of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce (which do not include Ford) as against one-fourth of their total business in 1933.

"In each of the first four months of this year, Chrysler Motors passenger cars sold at retail represented a larger percentage of the total retail automobile business of the United States than in the corresonding months of last year."

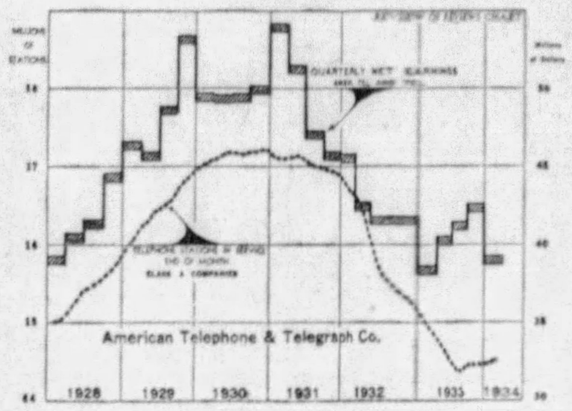
NEW YORK, June 16.—(AP.)—Bond offerings for the current week totaled $18,284,000, compared with $16,734,500 in the previous week and $14,675,700 a year ago.

A. T. & T. Net Rises With Station Gains



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE,
Review of Reviews.

This chart shows the number of telephone stations in service in Class A companies and also the quarterly net earnings of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. It may be noted that the two lines are in rough agreement with each other. The increase in American Telephone and Telegraph net kept pace approximately with the increase in the number of stations in service, and declined on the downward side a little more precipitously than the telephone curve.

This, of course, is due to the fact that the telephone companies, like many others, did not anticipate the full severity of the depression and found it extremely difficult to make the adjustments necessary to maintain earnings. In this they apparently were successful during the first quarter of 1933 and have since presented a creditable earnings record.

The telephone curve is a highly significant barometer of business which has received little attention in the literature of the depression. It has certain striking characteristics. First is the symmetry in the rise and fall, the slope of the 1928 and 1929 years being matched almost perfectly by the decline from the end of 1931 throughout 1932.

Another interesting aspect of this curve is the lag between it and the curve representing business or stock prices. The peak in business and speculation was reached in 1929, yet the number of telephone stations continued to increase, reaching its highest point at the end of 1930. For a full year—1931—while business and speculation sought lower levels the telephone lines responded but slightly to the decline.

Full and rapid compensation, however, was obtained in 1932 and the first half of 1933. The turn took place in September of 1933 and has continued to the present. During the first four months of 1933 the Bell system added 156,000 new stations. The gain of April over March is 48,000 stations.

MAY BUILDING AWARDS RISE

NEW YORK, June 16.—(AP.)—Contracts for all classes of construction during May in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains totaled $134,445,700, compared with $77,171,700 in the same month a year ago, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation.

Privately financed contracts amounted to $62,846,500, the largest total since June of last year, and 12 per cent above the total in April. Publicly financed contracts, chiefly with PWA funds, totaled $71,599,200, a decline of 8 per cent as compared with the April figures.

Contracts for residential building in May amounted to $24,847,000, compared with $22,685,700 for April and $26,519,700 in May, 1933.

Contemplated construction reported during the month in the same states totaled $241,271,200, compared with $319,721,600 for April and $352,467,000 in May, 1933.

STEEL PLANTS OPERATING AT 60%

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of steel ingots this week was fully equal to the rate of last week, 60 per cent of capacity. This is the third time in the depression that approximately 60 per cent has been attained, there being three weeks at the rate last summer and one week early in May.

Steel is being stocked for two reasons, prices and fear of labor trouble. June 30 is the last date on which steel can be shipped against contracts made before the April price advance. Railroad steel and steel for identified construction jobs are not affected by the price dead-line, while rails and tin plate were not advanced.

Sellers have no means of estimating closely the relative proportions of steel going into current consumption and into stocks. In sheets, strips and bars stocking by customers is fairly extensive, except by the automobile industry.

Before the stocking movement began, late in April, steel was being produced at about 53 per cent of capacity, and this was taken to represent the rate of consumption. Since then there has been a substantial decrease in consumption by the automobile industry and some decreases, insignificant individually elsewhere. Consumption can be estimated at a rate equal to slightly less than 50 per cent of steel making capacity, so that the equivalent of fully 10 per cent is going into stocks.

AUTO SALES REBOUND

Consumption will be lighter in July and there will be liquidation of stocks, making it appear certain that steel production will pass below 40 per cent and some observers think the average for the first three weeks of July will be nearer 30 per cent. As a universal holiday falls in the middle of the first week of the month some mills may run only before or after the holiday and the week's showing will have no significance.

While the automobile industry has been ordering steel very guardedly there is such a rebound in sales on account of price cuts that there may be a noticeable increase. The recent rate of automobile production represents a rate of consumption equal to about 10 per cent of steel capacity or about one-fifth of current consumption of all steel.

Fabricated structural steel awards have been running about the same in the last few weeks as earlier in the year, while the year to date is about 10 per cent over the general average of last year. In the last few months commercial and railroad work has been appearing while last year there was virtually nothing but public work.

The revised steel code became effective last Monday and steel mills have filed their former prices, effective the same date. As revised, the code requires that prices be filed afresh for each quarter even when there is no change and once a price is filed no advance can be made for that quarter.

SLACK PERIOD AHEAD

Reductions are permitted and must be permanent for the quarter. Thus buyers have no occasion to make contracts except to insure their being supplied and for the major part of the third quarter the question would not arise because consumption will be far below capacity. Contracting for fourth quarter will not be permissible until September 1.

Steel producers expect the market to be very dull in July and August, from the double influence of the season and the stocks in buyers' hands, but expect a marked increase in activity for September, with stocks out of the way and a favorable seasonal influence.

Steel production in the quarter now ending will be more than one-third above that in the March quarter, the increase much more than offsetting additional cost on account of the wage advance of April 1. For third quarter there will be higher average prices, but a lighter operation more than offsetting.

The scrap market has continued in a state of extreme dullness. Mills have bought nothing for weeks and there is virtually no trading between dealers. Heavy melting steel continues to be appraised at $11.50 to $12 as a nominal quotation.

The Thin Man

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

"I'm kind of jumpy this afternoon, for a fact," he said. "I didn't get a single solitary wink of sleep last night. It's a hell of a life. I don't know why I stick to it. A fellow can get a piece of land and some wire fencing and a few head of silver fox and—well, anyways, when you people scared Jorgensen off back in '25, he says he lit out for Germany, leaving his wife in the lurch—though he don't say much about that—and changing his name to give you more trouble finding him, and on the same account he's afraid to work at his regular job—he calls himself some kind of a technician or something—so pickings are kind of slim.

"He says he worked at one thing and another, whatever he could get, but near as I can figure out he was mostly gigoloing, if you know what I mean, and not finding too many heavy-money dames. Well, along about '27 or '28 he's in Milan—that's a city in Italy—and he sees in the Paris Herald where this Mimi, recently divorced wife of Clyde Miller Wynant, has arrived in Paris. He don't know her personally and she don't know him, but he knows she's a dizzy blonde that likes men and fun and hasn't got much sense. He figures a bunch of Wynant's dough must've come to her with the divorce and, the way he looks at it, any of it he could take away from her wouldn't be any more than what Wynant had gypped him out of—he'd only be getting some of what belonged to him. So he scrapes up the fare to Paris and goes up there. All right so far?"

Synopsis

Nick Charles, noted detective, who tells the story of "The Thin Man," and Nick's wife, Nora, meet Dorothy Wynant, daughter of a former client, in a speakeasy. Herbert Macaulay, Wynant's attorney, tells Nick; Mimi, Wynant's divorced wife, is hunting Wynant.

Next day Nick reads of the murder of Julia Wolf, Wynant's secretary. Mimi found the body when she went to get Wynant's address.

While a Mr. Norman is telephoning to Nick a loud report as of a shot is heard and his words end abruptly.

Police find Dorothy's automatic in Nick's apartment. Julia served time for working badger game. Guild tells Nick. Wynant's letter urges Nick hunt slayer. Nick convinced that Mimi is hiding evidence. Morelli tells Nick life story of Julia. Nick arrives as police are quizzing Mimi. Dorothy tells Nick brother is seeing father. Macaulay says he saw Wynant near murder scence. Guild quizzes Nick.

Trick Marriage

"Sounds all right."

"That's what I thought. Well, he don't have any trouble getting to know her in Paris—either picking her up or getting somebody to introduce him or whatever happened—and the rest of it's just as easy. She goes for him in a big way—bing, according to him—right off the bat, and the first thing you know she's one jump ahead of him, she's thinking about marrying him. Naturally, he don't try to talk her out of that.

"She'd gotten a lump sum—two hundred thousand berries, by heaven!—out of Wynant instead of alimony, so her marrying again wasn't stopping any payments, and it'll put him right in the middle of the cash drawer. So they do it. According to him, it was a trick marriage up in some mountains he says are between Spain and France and was done by a Spanish priest on what was really French soil, which don't make it legal, but I figure he's just trying to discourage a bigamy rap. Personally, I don't care one way or the other. The point is he got his hands on the dough and kept them on it till there wasn't any more dough. And all this time, understand, he says she didn't know he was anybody but Christian Jorgensen, a fellow she met in Paris, and still didn't know up to the time we grabbed him in Boston. Still sound all right?"

"Still sounds all right," I said, "except, as you say, about the marriage, and even that could be all right."

"Uh-huh, and what difference does it make anyways? So comes the winter and the bankroll's getting skinny and he's getting ready to take a run-out on her with the last of it, and then she says maybe they could come back to America and tap Wynant for some more. He thinks that's fair enough if it can be done, and she thinks it can be done, so they get on a boat and—"

Story Cracks a Little

"The story cracks a little there," I said.

"What makes you think so? He's not figuring on going to Boston, where he knows his first wife is, and he's figuring on keeping out of the way of the few people that know him, including especially Wynant, and somebody's told him there's a statute of limitation making everything just lovely after seven years. He don't figure he's running much risk. They ain't going to stay here long."

"Well, the second day he's here—while they're still trying to find Wynant—he gets a bad break. He runs into a friend of his first wife's—this Olga Fenton—on the street and she recognizes him. He tries to talk her out of tipping off the first wife and does manage to stall her along a couple days with a moving picture story he makes up—what an imagination that guy's got!—but he don't fool her long, and she goes to her parson and tells him about it and asks him what she ought to do and he says she ought to tell the first wife, and so she does, and the next time she sees Jorgensen she tells him what she's done, and he lights out for Boston to try to keep his wife from kicking up trouble and we pick him up there."

"How about his visit to the hock shop?" I asked.

"That was part of it. He says there was a train for Boston leaving in a few minutes and he didn't have any dough with him and didn't have time to go home for some—besides not being anxious to face the second wife till he had the first one quieted down—and the banks were closed, so he soaked his watch. It checks up."

"Did you see the watch?"

"I can. Why?"

Might Be Wynant's

"I was wondering. You don't think it was once on the other end of that piece of chain Mimi turned over to you?"

He sat up straight. "By God!" Then he squinted at me suspiciously and asked: "Do you know anything about it or are you—"

"No. I was just wondering. What does he say about the murders now? Who does he think did them?"

"Wynant. He admits for a while he thought Mimi might've, but he says she convinced him different. He claims she wouldn't tell him what she had on Wynant. He might be just trying to cover himself up on that. I don't guess there's any doubt about them meaning to use it to shake him down for that money they wanted."

"Then you don't think she planted the knife and chain?"

Guild pulled down the ends of his mouth. "She could've planted them to shake him down with. What's wrong with that?

"It's a little complicated for a fellow like me," I said. "Find out if Face Peppler's still in the Ohio pen?"

"Uh-huh. He gets out next week. That accounts for the diamond ring. He had a pal of his on the outside send it to her for him. Seems they were planning to get married and go straight together after he got out, or some such. Anyways, the warden says he saw letters passing between them reading like that. This Peppler won't tell the warden that he knows anything that'll help us, and the warden don't call to mind anything that was in their letters that's any good to us. Of course, even this much helps some, with the motive. Say Wynant's jealous and she's wearing this other guy's ring and getting ready to go away with him. That'll—" He broke off to answer his telephone. "Yes," he said into it. "Yes . . . What? . . . Sure . . . Sure, but leave somebody there . . . That's right." He pushed the telephone aside. "Another bum steer on that West Twenty-ninth street killing yesterday."

Heard Wynant's Name

"Oh," I said. "I thought I heard Wynant's name. You know how some telephone voices carry."

He blushed, cleared his throat. "Maybe something sounded like it—why not, I guess. Uh-huh, that could sound like it—why not. I almost forgot: we looked up that fellow Sparrow for you."

"What'd you find out?"

"It looks like there's nothing there for us. His name's Jim Brophy. It figures out that he was making a play for that girl of Nunheim's and she was sore at you and he was just drunk enough to think he could put himself in solid with her by taking a poke at you."

"A nice idea," I said. "I hope you didn't make any trouble for Studsy."

"A friend of yours? He's an ex-con, you know, with a record as long as your arm."

"Sure. I sent him over once." I started to gather up my hat and overcoat. "You're busy. I'll run along and—"

"No, no," he said. "Stick around if you got the time. I got a couple things coming in that'll maybe interest you, and you can give me a hand with that Wynant kid, too, maybe."

I sat down again.

"Maybe you'd like a drink," he suggested, opening a drawer of his desk, but I had never had much luck with policemen's liquor, so I said: "No, thanks."

His telephone rang again and he said into it: "Yes . . . Yes . . . That's all right. Come on in." This time no words leaked out to me.

He rocked back in his chair and put his feet on his desk. "Listen. I'm on the level about that silver fox farming and I want to ask you what you think of California for a place."

LEAGUE OF NATIONS—WORLD COURT—CHARLES EVANS HUGHES ADDRESSING COURT, 1929

The Covenant of the League of Nations, incorporated in the Peace Treaty of Versailles (1919), provides: 1, an assembly with one vote for each represented country; 2, a council consisting of representatives of Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan (withdrew later) and four others (later nine) elected by the assembly; 3, a secretariat with a permanent office in Geneva.

The League of Nations administers international territory (Saar Valley, Danzing, Fiume, etc.), supervises government of mandated territories (former German colonies, newly formed countries in the Near East, etc.). It succeeded in preventing minor wars, to obtain international loans, but is far from perfect in arbitration aims.

Article XIV of the covenant provides for a permanent court, its 15 judges are elected by the assembly and council of the League of Nations (for nine years). The court sits at the Peace Palace at The Hague, a gift of Andrew Carnegie. It hears, settles disputes about interpretation of treaties, international law, investigates alleged breach of obligations, suggests solutions, repair. Holding an Austro-German custom union a treaty violation, it was criticized as biased. Though U. S. did not enter the League of Nations, American judges were sent to the World Court: Prof. J. Bassett, Charles E. Hughes, F. B. Kellogg (had great part in Pact of Paris).

WORLD WAR REPARATIONS—ORIGINATORS OF PLANS

In accordance with the Versailles Treaty, an appointed Reparations Commission fixed 32 billion dollars as reparation to be paid by Germany. Germany, defaulting, French occupied the Ruhr Valley, its rich coal; steel-plants, throwing Germany into bankruptcy. The French aggressiveness, jeopardizing the interests of the other allies, led to acceptance of the plan of Gen. Charles G. Dawes in 1923 (later Vice President in the Coolidge administration). It provided for withdrawal of the French troops from the Ruhr Valley, an international loan to Germany to stabilize the mark, progressive annual payments of reparations of a non-fixed total from determined sources.

For Germany it became more and more difficult to meet the increasing reparation payments, so the Dawes Plan was substituted by the Young Plan (1929), fixing the principal at nine billion dollars to be paid with cumulative interest during 58 years, totaling 27 billions. The annual paymenis were set at $490,000,000, partly postponable. A Bank of International Settlements was created (Basel, Switzerland) to handle reparation payments and to act as clearing house for international exchange.

The economic crisis of the world growing worse, President Herbert Hoover, in 1931, declared a one-year moratorium for reparations and war debt payments. In this he was joined by other interested parties. U. S. Congress ratified the moratorium with the reservation that there should be no war debt cancellation. (World Hist.)

ADMINISTRATION OF PRESIDENT HERBERT HOOVER (1929-1933)—CABINET MEMBERS

In 1928 Herbert Hoover was elected President, Charles Curtis Vice President on the Republican ticket. Important happenings under Hoover's administration: Hawley-Smoot (Grundy) Protective Tariff Act passed; Agricultural Marketing Act created the Farm Board with $500,000,000 fund to buy agricultural surplus (outcrop of the McNary-Haugen Bill vetoed by Coolidge); collapse of prosperity, climaxing in financial panic, worst depression in history; Reconstruction Finance Corportation created with $500,000,000 fund, to supply banks, railroads, etc., with loans; Home Loan Bank established aiming to save small home owners from mortgage foreclosures.

In foreign affairs; Co-operation with League of Nations in China-Japanese crisis; declaration against recognition of any "de facto" situation brought about by violation of treaties; the London Naval Conference for limitation of navies; General Disarmament Conference, deadlocked (1932); one-year moratorium for reparations and war debts (1931-1932) leading to Lausanne Accord (1932, nations scaling down Germany's reparation-obligation provided United States foots the bill by forgetting her loans to them).

Increasing depression and spreading unemployment proved the measures of the Hoover administration unsatisfactory, resulting in a landslide for the Democratic candidate, Franklin D. Roosevelt, in 1932. (United States History)

HYPNOTISM BY FIXATION

HYPNOTISM—DANGEROUS EXPERIMENT

Hypnotism is a mental state, resembling sleep, in which the subject is readily susceptible to suggestions. As being hypnotized means to be put into a deranged nervous condition bordering on temporary insanity, our information aims protection.

Methods to produce hypnosis: Fixing eyes steadily upon a point, passing hands before the face, gentle stroking in one direction, monotonous sounds, music, repeated verbal suggestion of sleep. It is terminated by calling, shaking, command, etc.

Hypnotic stages: 1, Somnolence (consciousness impaired but medium still can resist suggestions offered); 2, light sleep (medium ready to accept suggestions, cannot open eyes, but coming out remembers what happened); 3, deep sleep or somnambulism (medium accepts blindly suggestions of operator; catalepsy, muscular rigidity with anaesthesia; medium will remember nothing). A criminal operator may thus order and commit undetected most hideous crimes through mediums.

CELLULOSE, MAIN CONSTITUENT OF WOOD—PAPER PULP

Wood is made up of cellulose [(C6H10O5)X], carbohydrates, cemented together in long fibres by lignin, a gummy substance.

Paper pulp (basic material of paper), is made mostly of wood cellulose dissolving, removing lignin and other undesirable matter by "digesting." This consists of cooking chips of unbarked wood under pressure with solution of calcium disulphite, $Ca(HSO_3)_2$ (sulphite pulp), or sodium hydroxide NaOH (soda-pulp) or caustic soda, NaOH and sodium sulphite, Na_2S (sulphate pulp).

Planning Spoils the Fun

Every big organization now has its specialist who works out details with a nimble eye and a dextrous wrist.

We just skimmed the edges of a travel booklet printed by a large, robust railroad. It says, "Let our planner plot your summer. Why should you think for nothing when we have a lady who gets paid for it? We can plan you into the mountains at sea level rates. Or we can plan you on the beach with the bathing beauties."

The planner comes around and starts sticking pins in maps. That's your route. Every place you visit you pull out a pin. By the time you have a handful of pins you have had a pleasant summer. It's got to be so. No pin was ever a liar.

If you want to furnish your house call in a bungalow planner. He will place furniture where the foot of a white man has never trod before. He will put the oil cloth on the walls, hang the draperies from trees and change the floor lamps into a municipal system of traffic lights. There ain't any chance of you spilling your plans to the enemy if you don't know them yourself.

They will even plan your meals, your clothes and your shoes. You will never get indigestion if you eat an egg from blueprints. Top that off with a saucer of coffee with a toasted booklet.

All things should be figured out on advance. The man who can plan a year ahead is the man who will succeed provided he ain't got a grocer who demands cash on the spot.

Everything the writer does is on impulse. He realizes now it is wrong. You should plan ahead for old age because there is nothing that will make a grifter's eye sparkle like ripping open a feather pillow to snitch your life savings.

From now on we proceed cautiously on a methodically plotted course. We intend to have fever charts for everything except Sunday driving. That's one thing you are foolish to plan ahead because you are always bumped from the rear.

Guess we will also drop the plans about the summer vacation. We have noticed that the one who has the most ideas is always left home.

The best way is to jump into the car, toss a spare tire into the lunch basket and make the plans guess where you are.

ODD FACTS

Plans for a tower of reinforced concrete more than twice the height of the Eiffel Tower have been prepared by a famous French engineer, M. Freyssinet. It has been suggested that this fantastic structure, of some 2,300 feet, might be erected in or near Paris, in connection with the exhibition which is to be held there in 1937, and thus repeat the sensation caused by the Eiffel Tower at the 1889 exhibition. It is suggested that this new tower of Babel might be called "The Lighthouse of the World."

One hundred degrees of frost can be reached in the coldest room in the world, at the Cambridge low temperature research station, England. Scientists engaged in this work never remain in this room for more than about 10 minutes at a time.

The guanaco, one of the native sheep of South America, is the fleetest animal which that country produces, and it is so courageous that when surrounded by the hunters it will turn upon them and trample them under foot. It is generally seen in droves or flocks of from 200 to 300. The guanacos are vigilant and exceedingly circumspect in their movements and when feeding they place one of their number as sentinel to announce the arrival of an enemy.

The gold crest (or golden-crested wren), is the smallest British bird, and, according to Johns, five and a half full-grown male birds weigh but an ounce.

Japan has 768 trade unions, 101 of which are in the transport industry. The total number of trade unionists is 370,123.

The Strike Menace

The Public Will Be Happy If Industrial Strife Is Averted—Comment on Local News

Notwithstanding the clamor of the hotheads in the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, the strike menace appears at this writing to have been sidetracked, at least temporarily. The improvement in the prospect for the maintenance of industrial peace will be welcomed not only by the public but also, we believe, by a great majority of the steel workers.

Without entering into the merits of the controversy, without taking sides between the steel companies and the workers, it can be stated confidently that a strike at this time would benefit nobody. On the contrary it would injure all concerned by retarding industrial recovery. Most serious of all the things to be considered, a strike no doubt would be attended by violence, and possible by loss of life.

William A. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, spoke words of wisdom in advising the steel workers' union to submit their grievances to an impartial board of arbitration to be appointed by President Roosevelt. Even if a strike were called and even if it should be fairly successful, from the workers' standpoint, the chances are that some such plan as Green advocated would have to be resorted to to settle it. The sensible thing is to avoid the turmoil.

Mr. Green made a public statement yesterday on another important matter. He announced that he had telegraphed the presidents of all the unions composing the American Federation of Labor, calling upon them to urge their Senators to vote for the housing bill as recommended by President Roosevelt. This bill, if promptly enacted into law, would release billions of dollars for modernization of dwellings and construction of new houses. It would benefit Pittsburgh immensely.

A revival in the building industry would furnish employment to building trades workers now unemployed, and also to the workers in trades having to do with the manufacture of building materials such as iron and steel, brick and concrete, glass and hardware, all Pittsburgh products. The building industry appears unable to throw off the depression in which it has been sunk for some time, and some sort of government stimulation seems essential.

The Sun-Telegraph is in receipt of a letter from F. E. McGillick, the real estate man, which contains some food for throught in respect to the building stagnation. Mr. McGillick asserts that the National Recovery Administration codes governing wages and prices of materials in the construction of houses are such that it now costs more to build than ever before. A house built before the NRA rules took effect can be bought, he says, for about one-half of what it would cost to reproduce it under code regulations.

On the principle that half a loaf is better than no bread Mr. McGillick suggests that the codes be revised to permit less expensive building. This, he argues, would encourage people to build who will not do so under present conditions. Whatever the cause, whether code regulations, as Mr. McGillick contends, or something else, building statistics, showing construction of houses at the lowest ebb in many years, indicate that something is radically wrong.

A building revival probably would do more than anything else to start an industrial boom. Meanwhile we have cause to be encouraged in the brightening prospects for the allocation of thirty millions of Federal funds to Allegheny County for public works. It is true that the government's insistence that tolls shall be charged for use of the Liberty Tubes, as well as for the other proposed bridge and tunnel to the South Hills, to make sure that the latter will be self-liquidating, complicates matters. But even with these projects eliminated the program would be attractive.

While the government loans are to be granted only for self-liquidating projects, beautification of the waterfront has been made an integral part of bridge construction in the downtown section. Bridge tolls will pay for improvement of the wharves. This is one of the most interesting features of the program, not only for esthetic reasons, but also because the lower part of the Golden Triangle, particularly in the neighborhood of the Point, which would stand to benefit most, has been sorely neglected, and is much in need of improvement.

It is generally assumed that Congress will grant the appropriation from which Allegheny County expects to get the funds for the public works. The disappointment that we experienced when the original appropriation of three billion, three hundred million for the Public Works Administration was allotted suggests, however, that our Senators and Representatives in Congress should be incessantly on watch until all danger of losing the grant now impending is over.

Inasmuch as the proposed public works are to be self-liquidating, the people will not be taxed to repay the loans. By enhancing property values the improvements will bring higher revenue to the county and political sub-divisions affected. Apropos of taxes, it is gratifying to note a saving to the taxpayers in the reduced cost of this year's primary election. Elections Director John M. Henry makes the gratifying announcement that the expense was $46,016, as compared with $88,825 in 1933.

Another pleasing piece of news may be found in the report of Miss Nell Scott, case work supervisor of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board, concerning 1,471 men on the county relief list who failed to report when assigned to Relief Works Division jobs. It develops that the relief list was old and inaccurate. Miss Scott finds that of the 1,471 men 898 had other work, and most of the others were ill, disabled, or had moved. Only 23 refused to do work of any kind, while 16 others refused to accept manual labor.

Do you know what a "distortograph" is? Well, it is a most amusing kind of picture. Some samples will be found in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. You will find in the magazine three "distortographs" of "Big Bill" Thompson, former Mayor of Chicago, seven of Mrs. Nixon, the former prize beauty, and a number of others.

Additional hilarity is provided for readers of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph in Puck, the Comic Weekly section. There is humor of all kinds. For delicate, subtle humor see "Skippy," as pictured by Percy Crosby. For more uproarious fun see "Bringing Up Father," by George McManus.

Yet his plea for better treatment
He's passed by, an Unseen Soldier.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 16.—A Manhattan summer evening, embering its final glow, has a deathbed loveliness that few cities attain. All the tall midtown spires are benisoned in sleepy golden shimmer. A sorcery of spangles and sudden hush in a reeling world of realities.

Even the vesperal bells have a far-away loneliness and Fifth avenue itself becomes tip-toey. Broadway for an hour or so sleepwalks in a sort of drugged reverie. Such naive memoranda was filed away this sundown in a leisurely walk from the park with Karl Kitchen.

No one can help loving this lunatic city when it suddenly sheds harshness and becomes so soft. It is between 5 and 7 p. m., I imagine, that rough drafts of odes and orisons to the metropolis are dashed off. In the studios stubborn blobs of paint melt into radiation.

The most exquisite canvases of the city are those imprisoning the final shadows of a closing day, catching the calm that's the cyclone's vortex. A New York evening is always a rebuke to the greedy, lustful farce of the daylight hours. I'm glad, somehow, I sleep through the mornings.

Ewing Galloway and I watched him talking to an attractive girl on Helen Gould's Fifth avenue corner, puffing at his pipe. At intervals she casually took the pipe from his mouth and took a few puffs, too. Then he went on his way; she, her's. But after a few steps he turned and called to her. She had forgotten to return his pipe.

Every man at some time or other nurtures a secret yen to swagger about in a rakish Panama with both a front and back dip. But only a few rise to the occasion. The most accomplished wearers that come to mind are Larry Waterbury, William Gaxton, Gary Cooper, Jules Bache, Clark Gable and, of course, Jimmy Walker who, with Warner Baxter, comprise America's grandest pair of chapeau tilters.

The Colony, if gourmets are accurate, tilts the tariff higher than any other city restaurant. The folded menus and the wine man, looped grandly with a brass chain like a Lord Mayor, suggest the lost but noble squat, brick Voisin on a rue Cambon corner. The Colony entrees shade upward from $2. Desserts from 50 to 75 cents. Food is good enough, the room intimately sedate and orchestraless. It haloes a mannered elegance. Subtly, indeed, its restraint makes everyone conspicuous. And that, messieures et mesdames, is a restaurant's crowning attainment. In bigger, noisier places, they employ a master of ceremony pest to achieve the same effect.

In a glorified honky-tonk a hop skip from Broadway a nudist bar frescoes its walls with various people of some importance and no importance at all, caricatured in cut out wood au naturel. I'm grouped among the Broadway columnists. It is not important, but I'm not, and never have been, one of the guild. And to stick one's face thus in a public place, without permission, is typically Broadway.

My sleepless nights are far apart and their genesis is usually in some triviality the average person would not notice. I spent last night in the wide-eyed manner of the goldfish because in a slowdown of motor traffic in Brooklyn I happened to glance up to an apartment house. On a seventh floor sill of an open window was a child not more than four, all alone, playing with some toy.

It's fun to be in a room with H. G. Wells. He is at all times a conscious actor, swiftly changing his role as occasion demands. He becomes the gallant Mr. Polly, the exuberant Uncle Ponderevo or the florid Chitterlow without slipping behind the scenes for fresh makeup. His walk has the springy gait of the professional runner, the appearance of being constantly on one's toes for the pistol's crack. Despite his garrulities, his emptiness about the subjects of which he is supposed to be master, there is no author today whose works and utterances are regarded more seriously. He has become a world oracle but one would wager that most of his pronouncements are done with a tongue in cheek. He could not possibly be serious. And mouth such twaddle!

I ran into Jack Dempsey and Hannah Williams the other evening, sitting dreamily in a cafe corner and I suspect holding hands. The modern troglodyte mooning and desperately in love would be something for a George Bellows canvas. Dempsey told me of the expected accouchement. "I hope," I told Miss Williams, "it will be another Jack Dempsey." She beamed: "And don't I!"

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Saving Humans From the Scrap Heap

Maggie's the world's most disreputable-looking truck — a blowsy, draggle-tailed old pile of tin. Yet when it comes to action, Maggie has what it takes.

Ten years ago she started as a swank service car. Since then, she has come steadily down the line, until today she's just a general roustabout dump-cart.

But we'd give up many a niftier gadget on the ranch before we'd part with Maggie. Under her battered exterior she still carries a wollop that would make many a Ducoed Darling look like a kiddiekar.

And, of course, it's all because we've given old Mag more than oil and gas. As she's worked for us, year after year, we've thought for her. When she was no longer up to one job, we didn't go on driving her until we wrecked her. Nor did we throw her on the junk pile. We fitted her up to something else. And she always came back—100%.

Often, when I stand looking at Old Maggie—thinking of the years we've stuck together, the jobs we've done and the care we've given her—I think, with a sad twinge, of those other workers who get no care at all. No mere machines those, to be made or replaced by any mechanic who has the metal, but something infinitely more precious than iron and steel—human beings, priceless miracles of flesh and spirit.

The indifference of the strong to the weak, of the working to the unemployed, of the man who's coming up to the man who's going down—there's no crueler tragedy or blacker shame in our civilized society. We lavish billions on expensive machines. We boast to the stars of our efficiency in preserving our mechanical equipment. And all the while an untold treasure in manpower and manpride is wasted.

"Sabotage"—we think that's a shocking crime. We're outraged if someone only ruins expensive machinery. But how much thought do we give to the men and women, still young and eager, whose hearts are broken and whose lives are wrecked by our callous stupidity? If we gave them a tithe of the care we lavish on our machines, they could serve out their years happily, profitably. As it is, millions are junked before they're 40!

Perhaps it's because she's a mother—and so knows the value of life—that Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, has determined that this human sabotage must stop. She feels that it is not enough to safeguard the interests of those who have jobs, but is equally important to create new interests, new chances for those who haven't.

But we can't do that by merely being FOR them, or saying something should be done about it; Least of all can we do it by "putting them on relief." For "relief," with no prospect of anything else but, will ruin a man and turn him into a menace quicker than any other catastrophe.

If we want to save our whole nation from the junk pile, we must apply the same intelligence to servicing manpower that we have applied to the use of our far less valuable "natural resources" as assets.

Meaning what? Meaning a practical program.

And right there you're up against plenty to make you think. Suppose YOU were Secretary of Labor, what program would YOU make for handling the unemployed men and women of America?

What would YOU do with men and women who'd been dropped from the only job they knew, and had neither training nor opportuity to enter anything else?

How would YOU arrange matters so that neither "the old and infirm nor the young and immature" should crowd out mature workers, or clog the wheels of industry—and yet, at the same time, keep everyone busy?

A big job—yes! But Frances Perkins has a plan for tackling it. And she tells about it in a current magazine. I wonder if you'll think that Madame Perkins' plan is good, or can you suggest a better one? If so how about telling her? She'd like to know.

Human Side of the News

Sir Harry Lauder Plans Another Farewell Tour—Charley Chaplin's Compliment to Harpo Marx

By Edwin C. Hill

THE flax mills and the coal mines of old Scotia were the university of the kindly, genial soul who again appears in the news. He contemplates, we hear, a tenth farewell tour of the United States—and very welcome he would be—Sir Harry Lauder.

At 20 he made the best investment of his life. He spent 7 shillings and sixpence for a license to marry bonnie Annie Vallance. Annie played the piano while Harry sang his songs and made his hearty jokes. Long and hard was the 10 years' struggle before the big chance came in the music halls of London. Success was instantaneous, and New York outdid London in its approval.

Lauder has the gift of showmanship. Endless and diverting are the stories about his ultra-thriftiness. Closer than an echo they call him. He doesn't mind. He takes the jokes and the digs the way Henry Ford took all those quips about the Model T. They were good for trade.

"I hope I am generous," Sir Harry says. "I'm not close-fisted, but I encourage stories about my being so. I even invent them myself. They are fine advertising."

No Contract Signed In 20 Tours

HE HAS made 20 tours of the United States under the management of William Morris, and with never a written contract between them—just a verbal bargain and handshake. The war cast its shadow over the lives of Sir Harry and Lady Lauder. Their only son met his death in the hailstorm of bullets that swept over the battlefield of the Somme. Harry worked indefatigably for the welfare of the soldiers. He established the Million Pound Fund for wounded Scots.

His King bestowed knighthood upon him. Harry cared little himself, but it was nice, he said, for Annie Lauder to be Lady Lauder. For 37 years, until her death five years ago, she was at his side, up and down the world, in good times and bad. She was the one he sang to with his "I love a lassie, a bonnie, bonnie lassie; she's as sweet as the heather in the dell."

It was after her death that he bared his heart in a letter to his friend, Hugh McIver.

"Hughie, old friend, I'm thinking that fate has not been very kind to me of late. First, there was the taking of Johnny, my son, who was killed in the war, and though the manner of his taking left us with the pride of knowing that he had met a soldier's death in a great cause, the blow was none the less sore for us who had set great store by him. I know that my wife felt it more than she ever let on, and I feel sometimes that she was breaking her heart over it, slipping away to him the while, but always trying to resist the call because of what she took to be her duty to me.

"One thing has been a comfort to me in my sorrow—the sympathy of my friends. I have been touched by messages running from those of the King and the Queen to the friendly thoughts of collier friends like yourself, and the knowledge that there are such friends in the world is the only possible balm for a heart such as mine at the moment."

Chaplin's Tribute To a Great Buffoon

WHEN Charley Chaplin tells who is the greatest comedia in the world, we are inclined t listen. Many of us would ventur that the champion clown of t universe is the gentleman fro Hollywood, himself, and the rich est of all the film actors with hi seven million dollars earned wit that trick mustache and th funny feet.

"But no," says Mr. Chaplin thrusting aside the crown, "put on the red wig of yonder incom parable buffoon, Adolph Arthu Harpo Marx." This droll fellow Harpo, in all his years on th stage has never opened his mouth He gets his laughs from panto mime. Like Chaplin, his action have always been funnier than hi words.

He's about 48 now, has been act ing 25 years and is so ordinar looking off stage that you woul never spot him in a crowd. He a great poker player, but his gol would give Bobby Jones a case o nervous prostration.

He knows a lot about books an is an insatiable reader. He an his three brothers have been knocking them out of their seat in the legitimate theater, the si lent films and the talkies for th past 10 years. The boys came from a Third avenue tenement i New York City and were put into vaudeville by their mother, who figured that if they were funny enough around their own home to make her laugh, they ought to catch the crowds.

Harpo, in his red wig and hi white face, is the clown par ex cellence, as well as a harp player who knows how to pluck lovely melody from the thrumming strings. Beyond all this, we have the word of such as Alexander Woollcott and Heywood Broun that Harpo is a great fellow.

New Deal for Indians Sought by President

By James T. Williams, Jr.

IF THE Indians of the United States get a new deal from this Congress they will have President Roosevelt to thank.

Passage by the Senate of the Wheeler-Howard bill, which provides a new deal for the Indians, was chiefly due to the President's vigorous leadership in its support. If it passes the House before adjournment and is not lost in conference, the Indians will also have the President to thank for rescuing them from further exploitation at the hands of pork-barrel politicians and other sinister forces.

This much-discussed measure will not become a law in the form that it was submitted to Congress. It has been amended at both ends of the Capitol by the exclusion of those sections which caused the most bitter disagreement among the friends and near-friends of the Indians.

Most legislation, however, is the result of compromise, and the President has wisely accepted amendments to his Indian bill in order that its main provisions might be enacted into law. As he said in his appeal to the Congress in behalf of this measure:

"The Wheeler-Howard bill embodies the basic and broad principles of the administration for a new standard of dealing between the federal government and its Indian wards.

"We can and should, without further delay, extend to the Indians the fundamental rights of political liberty and local self-government and the opportunities of education and economic assistance that they require in order to attain a wholesome American life. This is but the obligation of honor of a powerful nation toward a people living among us and dependent upon our protection.

"Certainly the continuance of autocratic rule, by a federal despotism, over the lives of more than 200,000 citizens of this nation is incompatible with American ideals of liberty. It also is destructive of the character and self-respect of a great race."

* * *

Abolishes Allotment Of Indian Lands

THIS humane and progressive measure, as it passed the Senate, abolishes the allotment of Indian lands. It extends indefinitely the period in which the government may hold in trust and free from taxation the lands which rightfully belong to the Indians.

It restores to the Indians their misnamed "surplus lands," which have been thrown open for homestead entry, and prohibits the sale of Indian lands to white men.

As the President's Indian commissioner, Mr. Collier has truly said:

But this legislative proposal would do even more for the Indians. It provides an appropriation of ten million dollars to be used as a revolving fund from which loans can be made to the Indians for promoting their economic development.

It provides also $250,000 for Indian education, and more important still it requires that any Indians who meet the qualifications for positions in the Indian Bureau must be given preference in all appointments to the service.

Thus between the educational opportunity, which will be opened up if this measure becomes a law, and the mandatory preference for Indians who can qualify, the Indians themselves will gradually take over all the work of the Indian Bureau.

* * *

Will Be Allowed To Form Corporations

UNDER this proposed legislation the Indians will be permitted to organize corporations for carrying on business activities and developing their natural resources. Tribes will be permitted to organize for their common welfare. The natural resources of Indian reservations will be developed for the benefit of the Indians.

It will be a disgrace to the Democratic leadership of the Congress if this legislation fails of final enactment before adjournment. It is in no sense partisan. The only opposition to it comes from the enemies of the Indians and from those dull-witted members of Congress to whom "the obligation of honor of a powerful nation" is without meaning.

Do you belong to civic bodies in your locality?

Are you active in your church—taking an interest in public schools—and taking part in public meetings for the benefit of your locality?

If you don't, you should.

More than likely you're not affiliated with any organization, but you criticize all these bodies in nearly everything they do.

The reason is that you don't know what they are striving to achieve.

Most criticism is due to unfamiliarity with the aims and objects of those you censure for their public activity.

If you have not enough interest to become affiliated in organizations with your community, how can you expect your ideas to be incorporated in their programs?

You should realize that residence in a certain section entails something more than just paying your bills and minding your own business.

As a part of your locality you are expected to take an interest in its worthwhile movements.
